More Snow Lashes West; 2 Governors Ask U. S. Aid

Weary Rescue Teams Again Begin to Dig Out as Worst Drifts In History Pile Up

(From Press Dispatches)

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Snow flurries lashed the Western ranges today in the wake of a new blizzard and weary rescue crews began all over again to dig out from the worst drifts in history.

At least two State Governors, appealing for all possible Federal aid, reported that the emergency was now beyond their own control.

Air Force cargo planes disregarded the weather to resume their life-saving haylift for an estimated three million cattle and sheep stranded on the ranges without food.

Five States Blanketed

Yesterday's blizzard left a heavy blanket of new snow over Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Oklahoma and moved into the Midwest.

Snow flurries continued in most of those States and in Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Wyoming, South Dakota and as far south as Roswell, N. M.

Winds up to 40 miles an hour drifted the snow anew in the range States of Nebraska, eastern Colorado and southwestern Wyoming.

Gov. Val Peterson of Nebraska, who said Federal agencies have been cooperative, nevertheless appealed directly to President Truman to speed relief.

"There is definitely no unified effort equal to the emergency," Peterson said in a telegram to Mr. Truman. He said the emergency was beyond the State's control and asked that the Fifth Army be ordered to assume control of relief.

Gov. George T. Mickelson of South Dakota also asked the Fifth Army for all-out aid and said State and local agencies no longer could cope with the situation.

President Truman allotted another $500,000 for blizzard relief Friday, boosting total Federal aid so far to $800,000. He signed legislation appropriating that sum to his emergency disaster fund and turned the money over to the Federal Works Agency immediately.

In Nebraska, one of the hardest hit blizzard States, the storm virtually ice-locked the State. Twelve inches of snow fell in Omaha, with lesser amounts elsewhere. Scarcely a road in the State was open.

"We're right back where we started from," said Governor Peterson. "We'll just have to start digging ourselves out again as rapidly as we can."

Peterson said conditions were desperate in Nebraska, Wyoming and South Dakota.

He asked a congressional appropriation of between two million and three million dollars to back Fifth Army efforts.

Distress Greatest Now

Brig. Gen. Guy N. Henninger, directing relief activities in Nebraska, said "human distress and misery are worse this morning than at any time since the storms began."

Fifth Army headquarters in Chicago shipped 30 more bulldozers to Nebraska to augment 57 Army bulldozers and 29 half-track weas-

Summer Temperature Of 73 Sets New Record

A summer temperature of 73 here at 3:42 p. m. yesterday made the day the warmest January 28 on local Weather Bureau records.

The previous high was 71 on January 28, 1876. The records go back to 1871.

Clear, windy and cold was forecast for today, with today's high expected to be about 40. Today's early morning low was expected to be 32 in comparison to yesterday's low of 39.

Patterson Will Case Is Settled

Compromise Terms Won't Be Revealed Until Agreement Is Given to Court

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Out-of-court settlement of the multimillion-dollar Patterson will fight was announced with dramatic suddenness late yesterday in a brief statement.

No terms of the settlement were disclosed, but one attorney said "complete information" will be available when the agreement is presented to District Court with a request to drop pending litigation.

Trial had been set for February 9.

The agreement to settle without trial was reached between attorneys for the executors named in the contested will of the late Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, and attorneys for Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, daughter of Mrs. Patterson, who brought suit to challenge legality of her mother's will.

Joint Statement Released

At 5 p. m. yesterday, reporters were called into the offices of attorneys Roberts and McInnes, in the Transportation Building. Mrs. Gizycka's attorneys, and handed this "joint statement":

"Counsel for Mrs. Felicia Gizycka and counsel for the executors and other parties in the contest of the will of the late Mrs. Eleanor Patterson announce that full agreement has been reached between them in compromise and settlement of the issues with respect to the will, and that at the convenience of the court the pending litigation will be terminated."

The statement was signed by attorneys William A. Roberts, Harold A. Kertz, Randolph E. Paul and Lloyd K. Garrison, on behalf of Mrs. Gizycka, and G. Bruce Brooks, Louis G. Caldwell and Roy B. Kelly, representing the will's executors.

No Hint on Newspaper

There was no indication whether or not the Washington Times-Herald, which Mrs. Patterson owned and published, was affected by the settlement.

Mrs. Patterson, in the contested will, left that newspaper to seven of its top executives. Mrs. Gizycka was bequeathed $25,000 a year out of the residuary estate and certain real estate.

Value of the Patterson estate has been variously estimated at $16,586,571 and $17,690,000. Largest item is a one fourth interest in the McCormick-Patterson Trust, which controls the Chicago Tribune, the New York Daily News and other interests.

The manner in which yesterday's settlement statement was worded raised the possibility that there may be a "swapping around" of various bequests under the will. It is likely that Mrs. Gizycka may receive other property under the agreement terms in addition to that stated in the will, plus whatever else may be given her in settlement.

If Mrs. Gizycka had succeeded in breaking the will, she would have been the sole legal heir to her mother's estate.

Mrs. Patterson died July 24, 1948, and her only child, Mrs. Gizycka, on September 13 challenged the will's legality, declaring it was executed through fraud and duress while her mother was "of unsound mind." She also charged that the probated will was not actually her mother's last will.

Barrage of Motions

Since that time, the suit has been the subject of a barrage of motions and counter-motions. Trial of the case has been repeatedly postponed, and in the latest move, the pretrial hearing was advanced to February 4, with the trial set for five days later.

It is known that at least one previous attempt was made to settle

Moscow Declares U. S. Seeks to Rule World Through Atlantic Pact

Proposed Alliance And West Europe Union Held Blows At United Nations

By Eddie Gilmore

Moscow (Saturday), Jan. 29 (AP).—Russia accused the United States and Britain today of trying to undermine the United Nations with a North Atlantic pact.

In a 34-page statement the Ministry of Foreign Affairs declared:

"Ruling circles of the United States and Britain have entered upon an openly aggressive course of policy, the final purpose of which is establishment by force of Anglo-American world domination."

"A plot is presently being carried out against the United Nations inasmuch as it—even though in only a small measure—hinders and holds back aggressors and their policy of aggression and unleashing a new war.

"In view of this situation the Soviet must more firmly and more insistently fight against the undermining and wrecking of the United Nations organization by aggressive elements and their followers."

Instead of allowing itself to be bypassed, the United Nations should value its authority more dearly, said the ministry, especially when the question arises as to who is "conducting aggressive policy and unleashing new wars."

Plans for Domination

The statement said that behind the western European union lay "plans for establishing Anglo-American world domination."

"Under such conditions," it declared, "participation of the USSR and countries of the new democracy in the North Atlantic Pact or similar alliances of states is, of course, completely out of the question."

The ministry said Britain and France, with support from the United States, have "broken with peace-loving policy and taken the road of preparing for new aggression in Europe."

The ministry said the Western European Union had in view "the possibility of using this group of western powers . . . against those states which were their allies during the Second World War."

Israel Recognition Planned

West European Bloc Agrees To Set Up Joint Parliament

London, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—The foreign ministers of Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg tonight announced plans to establish a Parliament of Europe.

An official communique made public by the foreign ministers of the western European defense treaty states at the end of their two-day conference here said the first step would be to set up a new Council of Europe. The eventual aim is to bind all western Europe militarily as well as politically, informed sources said.

The assembly, as envisaged now, will be consultative, not legislative. It is the first big step since 1600 toward a United States of Europe.

The same communique also announced agreement for de facto recognition of Israel.

The communique said the foreign ministers studied a report on European defenses, but did not disclose what action, if any, was taken.

The defense blueprint, drawn by the five nations' defense ministers, combined their military forces into a single, mobile mechanism armed by the United States and under the command of British Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery. Each state was to contribute specific military units.

This was the foreign ministers' last quarterly meeting before the opening of negotiations to join the Western European Union with the United States and Canada in the Atlantic Pact.

The plan to create a Parliament of Europe represented a compromise between French and British proposals. As it stands now, a Council of Europe will be formed which will include both the parliament and a smaller private body to handle defense. A few details were given out.

The compromise plan would establish:

1. A ministerial council composed of delegates responsible to their governments. This would meet in private and decide on all defense problems.

2. A consultative assembly composed of delegates selected in any way the member nations decide.

U. S. Resolution Voted

Security Council Tells Dutch To Restore Indonesian Rule

Lake Success, N. Y., Jan. 28 (U.P.).—The United Nations Security Council today demanded, that the Dutch reinstate the Indonesian Republican government immediately.

The demand was part of a 28-section resolution approved by the Council in a series of votes today. The resolution, sponsored by the United States, did not call for immediate withdrawal of Dutch forces from seized territory. It repeated the Council's unsuccessful December appeal for a complete cessation of warfare and unconditional release of Republican leaders.

The plan was approved in the face of a thinly veiled warning from the Dutch that they would defy the major parts of the American-inspired blueprint. The vote was 8 or 7 in favor of most sections of the plan with none against. But Russia, the Soviet Ukraine, France and, in some cases, Argentina abstained.

Dutch representative J. H. van Royen told the Council his government "must fundamentally object" because the U. N. "is not entitled by the U. N. charter" to demand any such "sacrifice" by a member state.

The Council voted down a Soviet amendment calling for an immediate Dutch withdrawal. It got only 4 votes.

The resolution calls for:

1. Immediately cessation of all Dutch military operations and all Republican guerilla activities.

2. Immediate and unconditional release of all Indonesian leaders and reestablishment of the republic as a working government in the Jogjakarta area.

3. Resumption of Dutch-Indonesian negotiations aimed at creation of an interim United States of Indonesia by March 15; free elections by October 1, and final independence for a dominion-type federation by July 1, 1950.

4. Strengthening of the Australian-American-Belgian U. N. Committee of Good Offices in Indonesia to empower it to "recommend" progressive transfer of territory back to Republican control and

10 Others Due to Follow

Australia, Switzerland Head Parade to Israel Recognition

London, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Australia and Switzerland, leading a parade toward the Israeli bandwagon, recognized the infant Jewish state today and nine other countries announced they were prepared to do so. A tenth, New Zealand, was expected to announce recognition at any hour.

After Australia and Switzerland announced their action, the foreign ministers of Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg, comprising the Western European Alliance, announced here that their governments were ready to recognize Israel.

Shortly after that, Iceland, Norway and Sweden were likewise prepared to grant recognition in the near future.

The developments made it likely that Israel will be made the fifty-ninth member of the United Nations at the special General Assembly starting April 5 at Lake Success, N. Y., provided Palestine remains quiet.

The only setback for Israel was a dispatch from New Delhi that said it was understood the Indian government was not prepared to accord recognition at this time.

The Western foreign ministers announced:

"As regards Palestine, there was general agreement that the stage had now been reached at which de facto recognition could be given to the government of Israel."

A Foreign Office spokesman said separate recognition announcements would follow.

With the announcements of Australia and Switzerland, 25 countries had recognized Israel.

In addition, Italy accorded qualified recognition this week by raising its consulate at Tel Aviv to the status of a legation.

Wage Decline Seen as Costs Continue Drop

Price Index Goes Down 3 Tenths of 1 Per Cent; Pay Cuts in Prospect

By The Associated Press

The Government's wholesale price index declined yesterday for the fifth consecutive week, and the economic winds brought a hint that wages, as well as prices, may have reached a postwar peak, with a downward trend in some cases.

More than 300,000 auto and electrical workers of the General Motors Corp. stand to take a 2- or 3-cent-an-hour pay cut on the basis of the Government's declining cost-of-living index.

Meanwhile, at St. Louis, the International Shoe Co. announced it is cutting the wages of its 25,000 production workers three cents an hour effective February 7 because of a drop in the cost of living. The workers are in 50 plants in 10 States.

Union to 'Hold Off'

And officials of at least one major union, the CIO's Amalgamated Clothing Workers, said they have decided against a fourth round of postwar pay boosts because of slackened demand for men's apparel.

"We're practical realists, you know," one clothing union official told a reporter.

Officials of the union, holding a powwow here, said consumers have had to pay so much for food in the past year they had little left to buy clothing but now that food and other items are coming down.

"Maybe the consumer will have more money in his pocket to buy the clothes we make."

Pay cuts for the auto and electrical workers employed by General Motors appear imminent because wages are tied by agreement to the Government living cost index.

Prices Are Still High

The index took its third straight monthly decline Thursday to 171.4. This covered December prices and was one-half of 1 per cent below November and 1.8 per cent below the August-September peak.

But prices still are high—29 per cent above OPA-controlled levels in 1946.

Every time the index moves 1.14 points General Motors workers lose or gain a cent in wages under their two-year contract agreement. Already they had received a 3-cent increase on a rising index.

Now that the index is declining GM workers will get a 2-cent hourly pay rate cut on March 1 on the basis of the present index level.

Labor experts say declining prices are bound to have their effects on wage negotiations this spring. Some unions already are stressing demands for better vacation, retirement and other insurance plans rather than wages.

Yesterday's wholesale price index declined .3 per cent for the week ended January 25.

On that date the index was 158.8 per cent of the 1926 average

1st Suit Filed Here to Test Loyalty Firing

The Washington Post

ELEANOR M. DEAK
Seeks a rehearing

First court test case on rights of Federal loyalty-security suspects to be confronted with charges made against them has been filed here in District Court.

The suit, on behalf of Miss Eleanor M. Deak, 23, of Jermyn, Pa., seeks to require Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall to supply detailed charges which brought her dismissal as an Army employe on security grounds.

Her attorney Ford E. Young, jr., of Washington, asked District Court for a writ of mandamus to compel Royall to produce this information, and afford Miss Deak a full hearing before the Army Security Review Board to enable her to "clear" herself.

Discharged Last Year

On March 1, 1948, the suit states, Miss Deak was notified by the Army of her dismissal as a personnel clerk at the Army's Allotment Division in St. Louis, on grounds that she had:

". . . Attended a meeting open only to Communist Party members," and "had attended meetings openly sponsored by the Communist Party or organizations known to be affiliated with the Communist Party and had evidenced active and sympathetic affiliation with these organizations."

Miss Deak, an attractive brunette, who first went to work for the Army in January, 1945, when interviewed here yesterday, flatly denied these charges.

She declares she is a "loyal American citizen" who realizes the "menace of Communism," and said, "The only organization I ever belonged to was the YWCA—and I'm not active in that."

Charges Flatly Denied

Because she has never been informed what the charges are based on, she says, she can do no more than flatly deny them.

Her attorney, Young, states in the suit that under the law by which she was removed from her job, Public Law 808, adopted in December, 1942, a person so dismissed must be "fully informed of the reasons for such removal,"

Tobin Delays Opening Labor Law 'Package'

Measure Ready, May Be Made Public Today, Committee Head Says

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The first public showing of the Administration's eagerly-awaited Fair Deal "package" of labor legislation, scheduled for yesterday, has been postponed until today.

Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin, who was due to open and display the contents of the "package" at a hearing before the Senate Labor Committee yesterday morning, said he would try to go on with the show Monday at 10 a. m. in the caucus room of the Senate Office Building.

However, Senator Thomas (D. Utah), chairman of the Labor Committee, announced last night that the measure was ready for delivery to him. He said it probably will be made public today.

There was much hush-hush in Administration circles as to why Tobin failed to unfold the "package" yesterday as planned.

Administration officials insisted that it was simply a matter of properly wording the "improvements" to the Wagner Act urged by the President along with repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), who initiated a move for an agreement to complete committee hearings on the labor code revision by February 10, said that he assumed the delay was caused by "differences of opinion" over the contents of the "package."

To this observation, Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) added: "It looks to me as though the Democratic steamroller had to be towed to the White House for new fuel." Morse has been vigorously protesting the limit on the hearings.

There was a strong belief in labor circles that Administration leaders were seeking to resolve objections of the AFL and CIO to a particular provision supposed to be tucked away in the "package." This provision would give the Government the right to ban strikes of an emergency nature—affecting the Nation's health and safety—through court injunction.

White House Work To Cost $5,000,000

NYHT News Service

The job of restoring the White House will cost at least five million dollars instead of the one-million-dollar originally estimated, it was learned yesterday.

A detailed estimate and report on the findings of the actual state of dilapidation, together with an exposition on the necessary repairs probably will go to Congress for approval next week.

Passion in Plant No. 2

Czech Poet Tells Wonders Of Love Among Machinery

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—A poem front-paged by a Prague newspaper today stressed the close relationship between love and industrial production in this "people's democratic republic."

The love lyric, by Arno Kraus, tells of the meeting of a worker and his girl friend at the factory gate:

"With her kiss, I heard the breathless question—
Whether the shock brigade in Plant No. 2
Had proclaimed its competition with No. 1—
'For there works Tony, and he has boasted
That he would wipe up the earth with you by his performance.
I only laughed at him, because I knew
That you are the best of all and that you can work
Until your bones crack in your body.'
And the young lover replied:
'We beat the record by 20 per cent.'
In his words there was love,

And there was no division between the good work and the good woman.
Until the blood boiled in my veins
To see her clasp him closely, starry-eyed,
'My dear boy, the best of them all!'"

As Symington Supports Cutback

Backers of Big Air Force Propose Use of UMT Funds

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Backers of a 70-group Air Force yesterday proposed diverting 800 million dollars budgeted for universal military training to bolster the Nation's air power.

This strategy was disclosed as Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington told the House Armed Services Committee he supported President Truman's cutback of the USAF to 48 air groups.

Closely questioned by committeemen on his prior insistence that a 70-group force was the minimum necessary for security, Symington said:

"From a military standpoint, we have felt and feel that 70 groups is essential, but the Administration says the money is not available. They know more about the over-all picture than we do. We support their program."

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) raised the question of switching the 800 million dollars Mr. Truman proposed for UMT to expanding the Air Force, as the committee continued its hearings on legislation to authorize a 70-group Air Force and a 837,000-man Army.

The committee chamber—jam-packed with top Pentagon "brass"—rang with laughter as witness Symington asked Vinson:

"Are you asking me, sir?"

Vinson said he need not answer.

Judge Denies 'Censorship'

3 Baltimore Radio Stations Found Guilty Under 'Gag' Rule

Baltimore, Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Three local radio stations and the news editor of one of the stations were found guilty today of violating the "gag" rule of the Baltimore courts.

They were cited for reporting the confession and criminal background of Eugene H. James, 31-year-old Baltimore janitor who was arrested in the knife slaying of Marsha Brill, 11, last July 6.

James, who also was indicted for the murder of Carol Bardwell, 11, in Washington, was convicted in the Marsha Brill killing last September and has been sentenced to the gallows.

In effect, Judge John B. Gray, jr., assigned here from a circuit court in southern Maryland to hear the case, ruled that the courts may limit freedom of the press when it threatens the right of a man to a fair and impartial trial.

The Baltimore court rule, based on English law and unique in this country, restricts publication of news about a criminal case between the time of a defendant's arrest and his trial.

Baltimore newspapers and radio stations may not report the fact that an accused persons has confessed or that he has a criminal record. They may not use any information from a confession. They may not tell about his conduct after arrest. They may not discuss any of the evidence discovered after he was arrested. They may

Flaming Cat Sets Crib Afire; Child, 3, Dies

Leavenworth, Wash., Jan. 28 (U.P.).—A 3½-year-old child burned to death and his parents were injured today when a flaming cat spread fire in their home.

The child was identified as Willard Morris, jr., by coroner's officers.

The fire started when Mrs. Willard dropped a gallon jug of gasoline on the floor. The gasoline spilled on the cat. The animal ran in front of a blowtorch being used to thaw frozen pipes and caught fire.

The cat ran through the house, spreading flames as it went, before falling dead near the front door. Brushed by the animal in its fight, the child's crib was set afire.

The parents suffered severe burns as they tried to rescue the child.

Russians Refuse Data U. S. Asked On Repatriations

Russia has turned down an American demand for specific information about why it has failed to repatriate some 400,000 German war prisoners on schedule, Government officials said last night.

The United States, in a formal note January 3, accused Moscow of violating a four-power agreement signed by Russia, the United States, France and Britain at Moscow in April, 1947.

Murray Speaks Out

Opposition To Insurance Program Hit

Madison, Wis., Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Senator James E. Murray (D., Mont.) bitterly criticized the American Medical Association today for campaigning against National Health Insurance.

In an article in the progressive magazine, Murray labeled the association's house of delegates "an august body of short-sighted seers" who are "spoon-feeding the American people" with propaganda about health insurance.

Murray is coauthor of a measure to finance the national health insurance program requested by President Truman.

He warned that because of its "lobbying" activities the association might lose its tax-exempt status as a scientific and educational society. He said the association's recent $25-per-member assessment to fight national health insurance was "a political slush fund."

Opposition Reaffirmed To Health Insurance

The American Farm Bureau Federation yesterday reaffirmed its "strong" opposition to compulsory health insurance.

Bureau directors said they had asked the Senate Labor Committee to defer action on bills to establish a Government health insurance program.

A move for separate passage of the 300 million-dollar Federal aid to education bill and a 35-million-dollar school health fund recently offered as an amendment developed in the Senate yesterday.

The Senate Education and Labor Committee tentatively plans to vote Monday on both the bill and the amendment sponsored by Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.).

A check of the committee indicated members are virtually unanimous for providing Federal funds for health services for all children, whether in public or private schools.

There was strong sentiment, however, on the part of some members for reporting the school health funds in a bill entirely separate from the aid-to-education measure.

Hill Predicts Snarl

Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.) said the two proposals are certain to run into a House jurisdictional snarl unless separated.

"In the House, education matters go to the Committe on Education and Labor, while all questions dealing with health go to the Committee on Interstate Commerce," said Hill.

"If the Senate passes a bill including both, it will run into a question of jurisdiction between these two committees. This would invite controversy and delay and might endanger the aid-to-education bill."

Pointing out that the Senate passed the aid-to-education measure last session by a 58-to-22 vote, Hill said he favors reporting the measure without any changes in the form it passed the Senate, and at the same time reporting a separate school health services bill.

"These two bills could go on the calendar at the same time," Hill said. "As soon as one was passed the other could be considered."

Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.), one of the 15 cosponsors of the aid-to-education bill, told reporters he also thinks the two bills should be reported separately and separately passed.

Ellender said the education measure has demonstrated it can clear the Senate by a large majority in its present form, but may run into trouble if "overloaded" with other matters.

Senator Douglas, in offering the school health services amendment, suggested it become Title 2 of the aid to education bill.

Providing up to 35 million dollars in Federal funds, the Douglas amendment covers dental, eye and other health services, including aid and equipment for crippled and underprivileged children in both public and private schools.

The health funds would be administered by State agencies unless these lacked the necessary authority, in which case the United States Commissioner of Education would administer the funds.

There was some talk of a compromise on 25 million dollars as the health service figure, but such differences as were developing were not over the amount but the wisdom of combing both measures.

AVC Unit Prefers Hospitals to Bonus

Baltimore, Jan. 28 (AP).—The American Veterans Committee, greater Baltimore chapter, urged today that a Maryland veterans bonus be abandoned in favor of mental hospital improvement.

In an open letter to State Senator Robert B. Kimble, (R., Allegany) the group urged that any funds for a bonus be appropriated instead to the State's mental institions, in the name of the veterans.

"Any obligation which some veterans feel is owed them by the State of Maryland will be completely discharged" by such action, the letter said.

Kimble said today he would meet on Monday with representatives of veterans groups, in connection with a bonus bill he intends to offer in the Legislature. He has estimated that the bonus might cost as much as 110 million dollars.

The AVC, an organization of veterans of World War II, first announced opposition to the bonus two weeks ago, calling it a "handout" and "treasury raid" that would "degrade the veteran who receives it."

Dual Highway Sought For Charles County

Annapolis, Jan. 28 (Spl.).—The State Senate today referred to committee a resolution introduced by Senator James B. Monroe (R., Charles County) asking the State Roads Commission to seek availability of Federal funds to help finance a dual highway from the District of Columbia line to Mattawoman Creek, Charles County.

At present, Senator Monroe said, the road is heavily traveled to and from the Patuxent Naval Air Station. The Federal Government may be willing to help finance the project, he said. He described the road's present condition as "narrow, crooked and rough."

Army Captain Acquitted of Duty Neglect

Fort Meade, Md., Jan. 28 (AP).—Capt. Joel G. Holmes, jr., of Philadelphia, was acquitted today of neglecting his duty in the treatment of soldiers at the Wurzburg, Germany, disciplinary camp.

Holmes was the medical officer at Wurzburg when alleged mistreatment of prisoners took place in January, 1947.

The general court-martial which has been trying Holmes for the past two weeks returned the innocent verdict late today.

3 More to be Tried

Three of Holmes' superior officers at Wurzburg will be tried separately on similar charges when the court-martial resumes Tuesday.

In today's final hearings, Lieut. Col. William C. Fitzhugh, chief prosecutor, described the solitary cells at Wurzburg as a "hell hole."

He said the cells were unheated and full of rats and that the prisoners has to sleep on "smelly and moist" bedding, eat out of unsanitary containers and live in "intolerable filth."

The prosecution recalled to the stand one of the three prisoners who charged they were mistreated in Wurzburg solitary cells.

Pvt. Joseph Suggs, 28-year-old amputee-veteran from Proctor, Ark., reiterated previous testimony that he was not given medical attention. He said Captain Holmes never once examined his frozen feet during the week he was in solitary.

Suggs was later returned to the United States where both of his legs were amputated below the knee. He is now learning to walk again at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington.

A defense witness, however, testified that Suggs "could have had medical assistance if he wanted it." He is Maj. Joseph W. Burtchaell, prison battalion commander at Wurzburg who assigned Suggs to solitary.

Misconduct Blamed

Burtchaell, who flew here from California, said Suggs' injuries were not incurred in the line of duty and were due to his own misconduct. The other two former Wurzburg inmates who testified that they had been cruelly treated are Henry W. McElroy of Bronx, N. Y., and Louis Henderson of Dumfries, Va.

Holmes' superiors still to face trial are Col. Harold H. McClune, 55, of San Antonio, Tex., former commanding officer at Wurzburg; Lieut. Col. George E. Pinard, 34, of Wessington Spring, S. Dak., prison officer, and Capt. Samuel H. Wolford, Clear Springs, Md., commander of the prisoners' stockade.

Indian Wins $250 In 'Jim Crow' Case

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Mrs. Vivian Turner Roberts, a part Cherokee Indian testified in a $20,000 damage suit that she was forced to sit with Negroes in a "Jim Crow" coach on a railroad trip to the South, was awarded $250 in Circuit Court today.

The jury did not render an opinion. Juror George Werne said that deliberations centered mainly on the fact that Mrs. Roberts "had been wronged."

Income Tax Debate Snarls Legislature

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Jan. 28.—The question of how much income tax Marylanders must pay for last year was still up in the air today.

Legislators are currently in a snarl over an amendment to the income tax reduction bill which would cost the State about $900,000 in lower revenues.

Introduced by Senator Edward D. Storm (D., Frederick), the amendment would reduce from 5 to 2 per cent the amount of tax on unearned investment income.

Most lawmakers are predicting Senate passage of a bill cutting the tax percentage from 2½ to 2 per cent on earned income.

This earned income bill already has passed the House, and Governor Lane in his 130-million-dollar budget for the 12 months beginning July 1 figured on State revenues on expected passage of such a bill.

Testifying before the Senate finance committee today, Deputy Comptroller Joseph McCusker made the estimate of the State's revenue loss expected to result from Senator Storm's amendment.

Delay Causes Confusion

McCusker said his department is "getting into worse shape every day" because of his inability to let State residents know how to file their income tax returns—the result of the Legislature's delay in fixing the tax rate.

Deadline for filing is April 15 and there was talk today of extending the deadline.

McCusker told the finance committee, however, such an extension would throw much of the income tax receipts into the next fiscal year.

McCusker was asked by the committee to report on the cost of exempting nonresidents from income tax payments.

Such a move is being sponsored by Senator L. Harold Sothoron (D., Prince Georges), who has said Washington might retaliate by taxing Maryland residents on income earned in the District of Columbia if Maryland doesn't maintain such exemptions.

There are many thousands more Maryland residents working in the District than District residents working in Maryland, he said.

Lively Debate Over Divorce Bill

Today's final session of this week was highlighted by a lively debate in the House on a bill which would make it grounds for divorce for a spouse to be given a three-year jail sentence.

Members of religious faiths opposed to divorce fought the measure, and the House, unable to agree on the bill and parliamentary procedure, voted to put action on the bill off until Tuesday.

Montgomery County delegates announced today that public hearings will be held February 15 at 11 a. m. on four bills relating to regulations on automobiles striking dogs on highways, trespassing of dogs, abandonment of pets and stealing of dogs and cats.

Equal School Petition Gets Big Response

Gloucester, Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—Gloucester County school authorities today described as gratifying the response of citizens to a petition requesting a bond issue referendum for new school construction.

The county's school board and school superintendent, J. Walter Kenney, have been held by Federal Judge Sterling Hutcheson in contempt of court for failing to abide by his anti-discrimination injunction.

The petition now being circulated in the county is the board's effort to obtain an election on a bond issue to finance new school construction.

Unofficial estimates of the cost of two consolidated high schools, one for whites and one for negroes, have ranged from $750,000 to one million dollars.

Stanley T. Gray, school board chairman, said today that both Negro and white citizens of the county have responded favorably to the petition.

Gray said the number of signatures obtained on the petition was not available. Monday is the deadline for circulation of the petition.

Approximately 800 signatures are required, it was said, to request Judge J. Douglas Mitchell of the Thirteenth Judicial Circuit to call a bond issue referendum.

In holding the Gloucester School Board and superintendent in contempt on January 13, Judge Hutcheson deferred imposition of "proper penalties" on the defendants until some time in April. A Federal judge's power to punish for contempt is limited only by his discretion.

Judge Hutcheson ruled that the courses of instruction in the white and Negro schools now are substantially equal. This equalization followed the court's injunction against discrimination. However, the Federal Court found inequalities still existed in the physical facilities.

New Mexico Judge Would Jail Half U.S. Agency Heads

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Jan. 28 (AP).—United States District Judge Colin G. Neblett today declared "If I had my way I would send half of the Government bureau heads to jail."

He made the remark in putting Leo H. Shanley, former Aztec farmer, on probation after convicting him of using part of sale proceeds to pay private bills instead of a $3600 mortgage held by the Department of Agriculture.

"The Government bureaus go out drumming up people to take loans from them," the judge said. "I am against it. They should feed the people instead. I don't think much of the employes either. All they want to do is keep a soft job . . .

"I've got to enforce the law. I put you on probation for three years—but don't borrow any more money from the Government."

Judge Neblett retires from the bench next month.

Warren to Ask Outlaw of Fla. 'Hooded Jerks'

Tallahassee, Fla., Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Gov. Fuller Warren announced today he will ask the Florida Legislature to outlaw the "hooded jerks" of the Ku Klux Klan who paradede through the Florida capital last night.

The Klan "obviously has set out to terrorize minority groups in Florida as they have in a nearby State," Warren said in an apparent reference to Georgia.

A motorcade of hooded Klansmen in 43 cars, bearing Florida, Georgia and Alabama license plates, rode through Tallahassee to celebrate the founding of a new Florida klavern.

It was escorted through the city by capital police. Sheriff Frank Stoutamire of Leon County arrested six men at the city's outskirts on charges of covering their auto license tags or having expired 1948 plates. Four of them were Georgians.

Ambush Slaying Widow Fears to Return Home

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—A Negro school teacher whose husband was slain from ambush near Lyons, Ga., last November said today she feared she, too, would be killed if she ever returned to her Georgia home.

"After all the talking I've done about this, my life wouldn't be worth a thing," Mrs. Amy Mallard told a news conference today. "As soon as I got back, the Ku Klux Klan would know about it."

The conference was held at headquarters of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

After his death, two white men were tried and freed.

The NAACP said Mrs. Mallard would tour the country under its auspices to relate her story.

Louis to Help Fight OnConstitution Hall Ban

New York, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Heavyweight Boxing Champion Joe Louis will take over the chairmanship of a national Negro men's organization to help fight the ban which the Daughters of the American Revolution have placed against Negro artists appearing in their hall in Washington, it was announced today.

The National Council of Negro Women said Louis had accepted the chairmanship of their men's auxiliary.

British, U. S. Unions Boycott WFTU Parley

Paris, Jan. 28 (AP).—British, Dutch and United States trade unions today reaffirmed their boycott of the Communist-led World Federation of Trade Unions.

Their representatives failed to appear at a meeting of the 23-member executive committee this afternoon. Louis Saillant, WFTU secretary-general, said all other members were represented.

Filibuster Foes Spurn Planned Compromise

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Southern Senators last night prepared to toss a compromise into the Senate's antifilibuster row, but bipartisan sponsors of a two-thirds vote gag on debate said "no" in advance.

The compromise, in its present rough form, would shut off debate only when 90 per cent of the Senate agreed to do so. Thus it would take 87 of the Senate's 96 members to force an issue to a vote.

Senator John C. Stennis (D., Miss.), who is drafting the compromise, said his purpose was to provide cloture only on vital questions of national security, but found an amendment difficult to draft in that form.

He said he would probably offer the 90 per cent without spelling out what constitutes a national emergency.

Four Oppose Ceiling

The compromise move was unveiled after four Southern Senators—Burnet R. Maybank (S. C.), Harry Flood Byrd (Va.), James O. Eastland (Miss.) and A. Willis Robertson (Va.)—testified before the Senate Rules Committee against a flat two-thirds vote ceiling on debate.

With six more Southern Senators waiting to be heard, the committee decided tentatively to close hearings Monday. Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) moved to close hearings Monday midnight in any event. He withdrew his motion after Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) objected to fixing any definite time limit.

Democratic and Republican sponsors of the two-thirds-vote rules reform pointed out that the Southern compromise would be ineffectual against any civil rights filibuster in which at least 20 Southerners may participate. They predicted the committee will approve the strengthened two-thirds rule once it gets down to voting next week.

Senate Democratic leaders, faced with the familiar party split, have never definitely programmed the rules change, but a leadership spokesman said it will be called up early in the session, possibly the week after next. Republican leaders want to make it the first order of business.

Cites Reds' Successes

During yesterday's hearings, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.) cited Communist success in tying up European legislatures in a new argument against unlimited debate.

Eastland replied that this could be met by the proposed compromise, limiting debate on matters of national emergency. Eastland said Lodge couldn't cite a single case where a filibuster endangered our national defense.

Lodge said that didn't mean it couldn't happen, adding: "We have international communism to deal with today, which we never had before. We have seen parliamentary bodies abroad where a small group of Communists gained control and tied things up."

Senator Byrd told the Senate the civil rights problem is being worked out and will be solved, "but not by coercion and Federal force." Byrd conceded the right of unlimited debate has been abused at times in the Senate, but argued that the benefits of free speech and free press "vastly overshadow their faults."

Senator Maybank told Northern Senators the time may come when they want the right to filibuster legislation "obnoxious" to their own section, and the proposed rule will prevent them from doing so.

Senator Robertson also argued the proposed debate limit may become a "two-edged sword."

"Today the South is affected," said Robertson. "Tomorrow it may be New England."

Mechanical Heart, Lung Held Perfected

Paris, Jan. 28 (AP).—A French biologist is reported to have perfected a mechanical heart and lung which can keep a human organ, the placenta, alive for more than three days.

He is Dr. J. Andre Thomas, a professor at the Sorbonne. His apparatus was described by the French Academy of Sciences in its January 3 report.

State Employes Discharged As Governor, Legislator Feud

Oklahoma City, Jan. 28 (AP).—Gov. Roy J. Turner today ordered persons recommended for State jobs by Representative J. D. McCarty, Oklahoma City, fired January 31.

Turner's statement which was released to the press said:

"I am instructing all department heads under my jurisdiction to dismiss all personnel employed upon recommendation of Representative McCarthy effective January 31.

"I should have done this several weeks ago when I learned he was impersonating me in bars and night clubs in Detroit, Mich."

McCarthy has been a member of the Legislature for 10 years.

Friends of Turner said the incident ocurred while McCarthy attended a Council of State Governments meeting in November.

Both Turner and McCarthy are Democrats.

In a statement McCarthy denied he impersonated the Governor and said in part:

"It is regrettable that the Governor, in his blind hatred of me personally, should so lose control of himself as to strike out at innocent people and cause some of the most capable employes of the State to lose their jobs.

"To my mind, an act of revenge such as this is unworthy of any Governor. Regarding the incident at Detroit to which the Governor refers, no serious attempt to impersonate him or any other public official was made. Someone at my table in a joking manner called me Governor and I, in turn, referred to him as Senator."

The Governor's office was reported to have learned of the alleged impersonations through the Governor of Maryland—William Preston Lane, jr. The Maryland Governor was reported to have walked over to see Turner in a cafe of the Book-Cadillac Hotel in Detroit—and found McCarty instead.

Turner and Lane met at President Truman's inauguration at Washington.

ECA Already Aids 'Backward' Nations

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Economic Cooperation Administration already has started a program of technological assistance to backward areas, such as President Truman called for in his inaugural speech, Marshall Plan Ambassador Harriman reported yesterday.

ECA, he said, is "equipped to go right ahead" with such assistance in "dependent areas" of the world for which any of the Marshall Plan countries "are responsible." He mentioned colonial lands of Britain, Belgium, France, the Netherlands and Portugal.

Committees of those countries are working on what Harriman termed "a sound program" for development of minerals and other economic progress. The target of these committees, he said is to develop "new cycles of trade, new outlets for goods, and new sources of supply."

The British, he said, had been giving such a program "substantial consideration," ever since 1946, "when I was ambassador to Great Britain." ECA's activities under Section Four of Mr. Truman's four-point Inaugural program, he said, are limited by law to Marshall Plan countries.

ECA money can be appropriately used where it fits in ECA programs or in the development of minerals, etc., in short supply," Harriman said. He referred to 300 million dollars provided in the ECA law for guarantees of private investments.

Only about 14 million dollars worth of such loans have been applied for. Harriman said that holders of investment capital have shown slight interest in investments in Europe. He indicated, however, that ECA officials felt that there would be more interest in investments in exploration and development in colonial areas. American private investment will start flowing as recovery progresses, he added. "Private capital comes out when the sun is shining," he said.

The discussion brought out that Britain already has requested engineering and other technical aid for connecting the gap in interior Africa in the Cairo to the Cape railroad, among other projects.

Thomas K. Finletter, ECA director in Britain, said England was asking technical assistance in surveying various areas in Britain's African and Far Eastern colonies to "get at the sources of raw materials needed by the United States and Europe." He said these included "not only surveys by air, but campaigns against the tsetse fly and malaria" to make practical operations possible.

McCarran to Head Joint Aid Committee

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) yesterday was elected chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Foreign Economic Cooperation. He succeeds Senator Bridges (R., N. H.).

The committee, which keeps an eye on all foreign spending, was reorganized to give Democrats 6 of the 10 seats.

The four Republicans are Senators Bridges and Smith (N. J.), and Representatives Taber (N. Y.)

Greeks Make Counteroffer To Guerillas

By Edgar Clark

Athens, Greece, Jan. 28 (U.P.)—Acknowledging a new guerilla peace offer, the Greek government over the Athens Radio today made counterproposals calling for an immediate general election and an amnesty for prisoners of both sides.

The radio announcement was couched in informal language. It provided for a cease fire in event of acceptance by the guerillas.

It was thought Gen. Markos Vafiades, the rebel leader, would not be inclined to accept unless the announcement was released in a more official manner. Also, the government's broadcast said that all problems could be solved if the "bandits" would lay down their arms.

The government's conditions for a cease fire also called for a nation-wide vote on whether American economic and military aid to Greece shall continue, authoritative sources said.

Sawyer Urges Export Control Continuation

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer yesterday urged continuation of wartime export control powers as essential to national security and this Nation's foreign policy.

The Commerce Secretary told the Senate Banking Committee that the Administration wanted export controls continued until June 30, 1951.

By that time, he said, the Marshall Plan may have so helped western Europe to a position of security that there would be less risk in lifting controls.

Sawyer pointed out that at the present time the interdepartmental committee is maintaining strict control over shipments of materials and equipment having military significance.

He expressed a hope that national security considerations would become less important.

"I believe, however," he added, "that it will be at least two years before the beneficial effects of European recovery upon world stability are realized."

Sawyer was the first of series of Administration witnesses urging Congress to enact President Truman's anti-inflation program, in which export controls play an important part.

Another Administration witness was A. J. Loveland, Undersecretary of Agriculture, who predicted that the United States will continue to supply a major part of the export bread grains for a hungry world. He said exports of grain and grain products in the marketing year that ends in July will reach "an all-time high" of about 18 million tons, and may continue "nearly as high" for the next marketing year.

Navy Presents Air Medal to Comdr. Thrash

Lieut. Comdr. Millard C. Thrash, USN, of 208 Rogers dr., Falls Church, has been presented with the Distinguished Flying Cross and golds stars for the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh air medals, the Navy announced yesterday.

Commander Thrash, who is 30, received the awards on January 18 for "heroism and extraordinary achievement" during the Guadalcanal invasion as a division leader and pilot of a fighter plane in the 212th Marine Fighter Squadron.

The Distinguished Flying Cross was presented particularly for his "skilled airmanship and courageous devotion to duty" in actions against the Japanese from October 29 to November 2, 1942, when he intercepted enemy attack planes on several occasions.

Commander Thrash is now working on the research and development of guided missiles for the Navy Department's Bureau of Ordnance.

V-2 Rocket Cut Off To Prevent Damage

White Sands, N. Mex., Jan. 28 (AP).—The Army sacrificed a V-2 rocket that might have gone outside the 1,500,000-acre White Sands proving ground today.

The 15-ton missile had been in flight 55 seconds and attained 1900 miles an hour velocity. Then the ground crew plotting its flight decided it could overshoot the reservation. In the interest of safety, they cut off the flight.

The V-2 landed 13 miles northeast of the launching site. It carried instruments to obtain high altitude information on cosmic radiation and radio wave transmission.

Webb Sworn In As State Dept. Undersecretary

James E. Webb, 42-year-old former United States Budget Director, was sworn in as Undersecretary of State yesterday.

Cabinet members, diplomats and Congressmen attended the ceremony, which marked the second major change in the State Department's high command since President Truman's inauguration.

Dean Acheson, former Undersecretary, became Secretary of State last Friday, succeeding Gen. George C. Marshall. Webb takes over from Robert A. Lovett, who resigned, in the No. 2 diplomatic post.

In his new role, Webb will be responsible for the day-to-day operation of the State Department.

Corson Assails Citizen Apathy On Government

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 27 (AP).—Citizen interest does not necessarily bring efficient government, John Corson, circulation manager of The Washington Post and president of the American Society for Public Administration, said tonight.

Corson spoke to the N. J. chapter of the society in Nassau Tavern with some 60 members in attendance, including State officials, members of the Princeton University faculty and students of government.

"Citizen interest in government doesn't make for administrative efficiency in government. Inasmuch as citizens are interested not in government itself but only in those activities which impinge directly on them," Corson said.

He used public schools and Federal income tax as examples.

Corson is former director of the United States Employment Service.

Wheat Quota Data Asked at World Parley

Wheat-importing nations were asked yesterday how much wheat they will guarantee to buy each year, while exporters were asked how much they will promise to sell, at the International Wheat Conference at the State Department.

The 53 nations at the conference —five exporting and 48 importing countries—have until Monday to make their reports. On Monday the Quantities Working Party will report how close the two groups are together.

Yesterday the steering committee, which will consider price and length of contract, was organized. All meetings were then put off until Monday.

Merci Train Gifts to Form F St. Display

Gifts arriving in the Washington car of the French Merci Train, expressing the gratitude of that nation for the Friendship Train, will be displayed in the window of the Woodward & Lothrop department store, Salvind O. Olson, reception committee chairman, announced yesterday.

The "Thank You" train will arrive here next Saturday evening and will be on display at the Pennsylvania Railroad's 14th st. yard, opposite the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, all day Sunday and Monday. A ceremony officially welcoming the train will be held at 4 p. m. Sunday.

The Merci Train was organized originally by French railroad veterans, but later was extended to all veterans' organizations and ultimately included the entire nation, with about six million persons contributing gifts. The train consists of 49 French boxcars of the "40 men, eight horses" type. One car will be sent to the capital of each State, while the forty-ninth will be divided between the District of Columbia and the Territory of Hawaii.

The gifts include 49 famous Sevres vases, a sword of Napoleon, glasswork, a coach of Louis XV, hundreds of pictures of famous French artists and many precious or historic objects.

Rebels Drive On Rangoon, Take 3 Towns

Rangoon, Burma, Jan. 28 (AP).—Rebel forces have captured three major towns on the railroad to Mandalay and are pushing southward to hem in Rangoon, a government spokesman said today.

Fighting was reported on a 40-mile front along the rail line while, 100 miles westward, Karen rebels occupied Bassein, second largest port in the Irrawaddy delta.

The towns of Toungoo, Tantabin and Pyu have fallen to the Karens, who may have been joined by Communists.

Reform 'Must' In Argentina, Peron Says

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Rotation of power between the political parties is no longer capable of maintaining the structure of the state, President Juan D. Peron told a special session of the Corstituent Assembly today.

Addressing delegates assembled to amend the 1853 constitution, Peron said proposed reforms were needed as Argentina had become a "socially just nation, economically free and politically sovereign."

"The structure of the state can no longer be maintained by the rotation (in power) between radicals and liberals. Administration is not enough. It is necessary to understand and to act. It is necessary to create," Peron said.

One of the proposed constitutional amendments would permit the reelection of the President for another six-year period.

Peron spoke for 45 minutes to the 105 Peronist delegates. The benches of the radical opposition were empty.

Red Drama Critics Panned By Pravda

Moscow, Jan. 28 (AP).—Soviet theatrical critics themselves got panned today—and how.

Pravda dished it out in two thirds of a page, denouncing them as "antipatriotic parashites, "aestheticizing nonentities," bearers of repulsive "cosmopolitanism," soulless maligners and prattlers of "inflated self-opinions."

"An antipatriotic group of vestiges from bourgeois esthetics has formed in theatrical criticism," said Pravda. The Communist Party newspaper called for their eradication from the field of art.

Pravda said some of the critics openly objected that Soviet heroes were always pictured in the Soviet theater as victorious. Others contrasted the classics with contemporary Soviet drama to the disadvantage of the latter. Yet another trick, the paper said, was silence.

Singled out for criticism were Critics Y. Yuzovsky, A. Gurvich, A. Borshchagovsky, L. Malyugin, E. Kholodov, and two others named Varshavsky and Boyadzhiev.

Chavez Hails Peron, Finds Him Friendly

The government of President Juan Peron is "probably the friendliest to the United States Argentina has had in many years," Senator Chavez (D., N. M.) said yesterday.

Spanish-speaking Chavez returned January 10 from a two-month unofficial trip to Argentina, during which he had a five-hour talk with Peron. He discussed his visit yesterday with reporters at the White House after a conference with President Truman.

Peron, he said, "certainly wants a democratic administration" and added that "if you could see his program in operation then you'd see he is coming nearer to ours every day." Chavez said Peron "wants a democratic regime in place of a dictatorship," and said it was "surprising" and "impressive" that "he, an Army man, should suggest the social reforms that he has."

Pressed by reporters for his opinion of Argentine restrictions on freedom of the press and radio, Chavez said that if press freedom was restricted, "I don't like it."

World Fund Aide Resigns to Head New Bank of Cuba

Felipe Pazos, assistant director of research of the International Monetary Fund, has resigned to become the first president of the new National Bank of Cuba it was announced yesterday.

Pazos, who has served with the fund since August 1, 1946, was in charge of the Latin-American division of the research department.

Announcement by the Cuban government of his appointment follows the enactment on December 30, 1948, of a new Cuban law calling for the establishment of a "Banco National de Cuba."

This central bank will take over the currency issue powers of the Treasury at Havana and will have broad authority for monetary and credit policies. It will be organized as a corporation, owned jointly by the government and by the commercial banks operating in the country.

Russia Seen Making 5000 Jets a Month

Munich, Germany, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Willi Messerschmitt, Germany's jet genius, said today it is possible the Russians are producing 5000 jet planes a month, plus supersonic fighters.

The 50-year-old Messerschmitt, who put the first jet fighter in the air, said Russia should be able to manufacture enough jet planes to defend herself against any Western bomber force.

He said the Russians had dismantled and hauled to the Soviet Union 10 eastern German airplane plants, and one ME-163, which he described as a prototype of the American supersonic fighter.

Between 5000 and 6000 jets a month could be turned out in one of the factories, he said.

Messerschmitt, who directed 52,000 workers during the war in his aircraft plants, today instructs 152 employes on how to make prefabricated houses.

British Asked To Cut Berlin Truck Traffic

Berlin, Jan. 28.—The Western counter-blockade against the Russians in Germany is being seriously defeated by the continuance through the British zone of truck traffic destined for the Soviet zone, American economic officials said today.

A sizable amount of machinery and raw materials still goes to the Soviet zone from such western European countries as Holland, these officials assert. The extent of the traffic has prompted the Americans to formally request the British to halt it.

It is known also that goods from western Europe and elsewhere are reaching the Soviet zone by sea through such ports as Rostock and Stettin.

Army Announces Reorganization of Troops in Austria

Vienna, Austria, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—U. S. Army headquarters announced tonight a troop reorganization plan designed to put American soldiers in Austria back on a combat footing.

Army authorities emphasized it was "strictly routine" and resulted from the fact that most of the Army's administrative and nonmilitary tasks have been turned over to the Austrians.

There are about 10,000 American troops in Austria.

A headquarters spokesman described the plan as "getting the boys back into the Army where they can become real soldiers."

Senate Unit Approves Nomination of Foley

The nomination of Edward H. Foley, jr., of New York to be Undersecretary of the Treasury was approved yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee.

The selection of John S. Graham of North Carolina to be assistant secretary, succeeding Foley, also was approved by the committee.

Other nominations approved included:

Daniel A. Bolich of New York, assistant commissioner of internal revenue.

Stuart L. Crenshaw, Virginia internal revenue collector.

German Women Getting Men By Use of Billboard Ads

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 28 (AP).—German girls out to get a man don't beat around the bush in a country where they outnumber men two to one.

They bluntly advertise "man wanted" on the big city billboards which fill the place here of American newspaper want ad sections.

Ads like this:

"Twenty-three-year-old girl, blond, medium-sized, blue-eyed, wants to spend weekends with wealthy businessman. Please forward offers to X."

Or like this one:

"I am alone. Good-looking and well-shaped 25-year-old girl wants to spend evenings with man not older than 30. Have own apartment."

The "love advertising" is a new idea, but it's spreading like wildfire. Mostly no mention is made of marriage.

Men use the billboards, too. One advertised:

Fifty-one-year-old businessman (looking much younger) traveling to Bavarian resort soon. Where is the good-looking girl, not older than 28, who wants to accompany me?"

An ad like that will attrack 50 to 100 answers.

German men now are offering more competition to American soldiers because since last summer's currency reform, they are able to buy cigarettes, chocolate and nylons.

Chinese Reds Line Guns Along Yangtze

Nanking, Jan. 28 (AP).—The Chinese Communists were reported mounting artillery on the north bank of the Yangtze today in positions to cut this confused capital's communications with Shanghai.

The news contributed to the pervading gloom of Nanking on this lunar New Year's eve, ordinarily China's gayest holiday. By the Chinese zodiac, the Year of the Rat is ending and the Year of the Ox beginning.

Military reports said the Communist guns were appearing at Icheng. While they apparently had not fired yet, they were capable of commanding traffic on the river and also on the south-bank railway and road.

[The New York Herald Tribune News Service said Communist troops were at Puchen, 6 miles north of Nanking and had been there for six days.

The government's military spokesman in this half-abandoned capital said Nationalist troops recovered and then lost Yangchow (Chiangtu), 17 miles northeast of Icheng, in an all-night fight. This was the only conflict reported in the civil war.

The Reds' slow maneuvering to isolate Nanking led to a growing conviction there would be no battle for the city, except for shelling.

Neutral observers said no defense of Nanking or of the north bank of the Yangtze appeared possible.

The new Year of the Ox is regarded by government astrologers as more auspicious than the Year of the Rat which has brought the Communists smashing victory.

Political developments continued confused.

There was no known reply to Acting President Li Tsung-jen's appeal to Mao Tse-tung, Communist chief, to name peace negotiators immediately.

(A clew to the Communists' hostile attitude was a broadcast heard in San Francisco, charging that government planes had bombed Tsinan and two other Red-held cities as recently as January 13, after the government had made peace overtures. This broadcast reiterated demands for punishment of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and Acting President Li as "war criminals.")

Some cabinet ministers joined the general flight from Nanking. Premier Sun Fo and Foreign Minister Wu Te-chen were reported in Shanghai, but could not be found there.

Army Lifts Comic Book Sale Ban

The armed forces yesterday rescinded a November 17 order which would have banned the sale at military posts after January 31 of any comic books not approved by the Association of Comic Magazine Publishers.

The Central Armed Forces Disciplinary Board, representing all three services, said publishers claiming to speak for 60 per cent of the comic books in ciruclation protested that the association does not represent a bulk of the industry.

The association, which campaigns far "clean comics," had been expected to boycott publishers who have not joined.

Hike in AF Fund Proposed but then wanted to know what the Air Force could do with 800 million dollars more.

"That would have to be discussed," replied Symington. "Assuming we got one third of it—"

"Assume you get all of it," returned Vinson.

Still Not Enough

The Air Force Secretary said a 70-group Air Force would cost about $7,500,000,000 a year. He added that they still would be about two billions short if 800 millions were added to their present budget.

Vinson then asked Symington to prepare some estimates of what additional sum would provide in terms of air power and present them to the committee on Monday. He was also asked to submit figures on the cost of a 59-group Air Force—present strength—and a 66-group force such as Congress voted for last year.

Later, an Air Force spokesman told reporters Symington had been mistaken about next year's cost of a 70-group Air Force. The $7,500,000,000 figure is the estimated annual cost after 1952, while next year it would run only $6,500,000,000, he said.

Committeemen wanted to know how many groups the Air Force had asked for when they presented their original budget estimates. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF chief of staff, replied that "as I recall it, we presented four programs—for 48, 59, 66, and 70 groups."

Representative Paul Kilday (D., Tex.) asked the Secretary about the giant six-engine B-36 bomber, which has been under criticism in the press and on the radio.

"That's the best hatchet job I've seen since I came to Washington," he returned. "The B-36 has the longest range, is the highest flying and soon will be the fastest bomber of its type."

Representative W. Sterling Cole (R., N. Y.) pressed Symington to say "who is behind this hatchet job." The latter said the Air Force is "trying to find out."

Committeemen also wanted to know whether there had been any change in the world situation since Congress voted for a 70-group program to justify the cutback. Symington replied that from what he knew of the situation, there had been little change.

General Vandenberg Heard

General Vandenberg joined his chief in urging passage of the bill before the committee. It would "authorize" a 70-group force, when and if Congress votes the appropriations for such a program. President Truman and Defense Secretary James Forrestal indorse the legislation, they said.

"When we can afford it, I think 70 groups are essential," commented Symington.

The committee tentatively approved the Army provisions of the bill before hearing the Air Force chiefs. It would give those two services a basic legal structure similar to that already on the books for the Navy. The group rejected a proposal by Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord of Baltimore, to write into the bill authority to spend Federal funds for National Guard armories, but promised an early hearing on separate legislation to this end.

Headline Questioned

Congressman Cole questioned Gen. Omar Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, regarding a headline on a story written by this reporter in The Washington Post of Friday. He said it declared that Bradley "backed a higher strength limit for the Army," while the bill maintains its manpower ceiling at the same level as voted last year.

Bradley said he considered the story to be "entirely accurate," but that whoever wrote the headline might have given a slightly misleading impression. (Actually the headline read "Bradley Asks Boost in Land Force Limit," and the bill backed by the general proposes an increase in the National Guard and thus in the overall land forces total.)

In urging approval of the Army-Air Force "composition" bill, Symington called it "essential to the security of the United States."

"In the atomic age of lightning attack," he said, "air power instantly capable of defense and sustained effective retaliatory attack is a basic need of the Nation. Without such capacity, when within a few years the one group of countries capable of attacking the United States will possess in quantity the absolute weapon, the lives of our people will be in daily jeopardy. That would not seem to be the proper heritage to leave our children."

600 Believed Dead After Ships Collide

Shanghai, Jan. 28 (AP).—More than 600 Chinese were missing and believed dead in a collision which sank two ships about 100 miles southeast of Shanghai last midnight.

Thirty-five survivors, picked up six hours later by the Australian destroyer Warramunga were landed late tonight at Shanghai.

The ships were the 4000-ton freight and passenger liner Taiping, bound to Formosa with war refugees, and the 2700-ton Collier Kienyuan, en route from Formosa.

The Chunglien Co., operators of the Taiping, said it carried no more than 500 passengers and a crew of about 75. The company denied Shanghai waterfront surmises it had as many as 1500 aboard.

This speculation was based on the Kiangya disaster of December 3. Explosion of that refugee ship took an estimated 3900 lives, more than half of them unregistered passengers who hopped aboard at the last minute.

The Kienyuan had a crew of about 70, making the estimated total aboard both ships 645, of whom 610 were missing. The Collier sank in 5 minutes and the passenger ship in 20.

Apprentice Group To Ask Deferring Of Trainees

The District of Columbia Apprenticeship Council yesterday decided to ask District Selective Service officials to defer registered apprentices with six months training who were making "satisfactory progress" until their instruction was completed.

Director of Apprenticeship Gino J. Simi said about 50 per cent of those in training will consist of men eligible for the draft. At present 1458 are enrolled.

The council will make a study of trades essential to war emergencies as a standby program, Simi said after a meeting of the council in the District Building.

The council elected James B. Luttes, regional manager Continental Baking Co., as chairman, and John R. Evans, vice president, Columbia Typographical Union, Local 101, AFL, as vice chairman. Simi is permanent secretary.

West Europe Plans Council

The consultative assembly, with advisory powers, would meet in public, but only after its calendar had first been approved by the ministerial council.

"Italy will be one of those invited to join the council as it already has expressed a wish to do so," a British Foreign Office spokesman said. Norway and Denmark also may be invited, although Sweden has declared she will join no defense grouping except a Scandinavian bloc.

No date was set for the first meeting.

Wartime Prime Minister Winston Churchill, long an advocate of a united Europe, said last May the idea was originated by King Henry of Navarre, of France, who labored between 1600 and 1607 to set up a permanent body representing the 15 Christian states of Europe. His idea was called "the grand design."

Bohlen Finds Red Acts Ruling Out Early Settlement

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Charles E. Bohlen, State Department counselor, said today the Soviet bloc's failure to keep agreements ruled out chances for an early East-West settlement.

Bohlen declared Russia looks on international law merely as an instrument for promoting Soviet purposes. For this reason he said the present cleavage is "not susceptible of being bridged by the magic of an agreement."

In an address prepared for the New York State Bar Association, he said there nevertheless might be agreements on "practical questions."

U. S. Reported Asked to Aid Rhodes Talks

Tel Aviv, Israel, Jan. 28 (AP).—Israel was reported today to have asked the United States to try to get Egypt to modify her position in the deadlocked Rhodes armistice talks.

A source close to the Israeli government said a Foreign Office representative called on James MacDonald, special American representative in Tel Aviv.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Jefferson Patterson, American charge d'affaires in Cairo, had discussed Egyptian-Israeli negotiations during a visit to the Egyptian Foreign Office a few days ago.

The Rhodes talks were said today to be near failure.

Ethridge's assignment is expected to last for about three months. The other members are France and Turkey.

Authoritative informants here said the United States was using friendly persuasions on both the Jewish and Arab governments to prevent a failure of the Rhodes negotiations.

Whole College Faculty Offered For Hire in Climax to Dispute

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 28 (AP).—A college "faculty" offered itself for hire today and promised to provide its own student body and alumni.

Apparently all that is lacking is a campus.

The unique offer came from a croup of Olivet (Mich.) College faculty members in a classified "situations wanted" advertisement in the Lansing State Journal.

It was the latest climax to a faculty dispute that began last fall with the firing of an Olivet professor and his wife for what certain sources called their "ultra liberal" views. The college never discussed its reasons publicly.

Olivet, in Central Michigan, has a student body of about 300 and some 35 faculty members and administrators.

Tucker P. Smith, one of five instructors recently dismissed, paid $25 to have the ad inserted for one day under the heading "College Faculty for Hire as a Unit."

"Prepared to offer balanced and advanced curriculum for small, liberal arts college," the advertisement read in part. Substantial upper class student body and alumni group wish to accompany (to) aid in transplanting unique educational tradition."

A spokesman for Smith said a prospective employer would get the following:

At least a dozen veteran Olivet College instructors.

At least 50 coeds and an undetermined number of men students.

From 175 to 200 ready made alumni of Olivet who are ready to transfer their allegiance and support to a new college.

There were no takers immediately.

The various groups are said to be opposed to the policies of Olivet's new president, Aubrey L. Ashby, a former radio executive. He fired sociology Prof. T. Barton Akeley and his wife, a librarian, last fall.

Despite a strike by a group of students, Dr. Ashby refused to reinstate the Akeleys. Last December he refused to rehire five other instructors on financial grounds, Smith among them.

Smith, president of the Olivet College AFL Teachers' Union and Socialist Party candidate for Vice President last year, said Ashby was trying to "revamp" Olivet by choosing "his own faculty."

U. S. Flying Man From Germany For Treason Trial

The Justice Department said last night that Herbert John Burgman, former employe in the United States Embassy in Berlin, is now being flown across the Atlantic to face a treason charge here. He is expected to reach Washington from Frankfurt, Germany, about 6 p. m. today.

The Justice Department announced early this month that Burgman, who has worked for the State Department for 20 years, had been placed under arrest by American occupation forces at the department's request.

The department said a treason case will be presented against him before a grand jury here, based on the allegation that he refused repatriation to this country when the war broke out in 1941, and instead took a job with the German shortwave radio and made broadcasts in English to American armed forces.

Communist Trial Judge Threatened

New York, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Federal Judge Harold R. Medina revealed today that he had received several threatening communications since the trial of 11 top United States Communists began but said that he was not concerned.

The soft-spoken judge suggested, however, that the threats might be the result of "emotional accusations" made by defense attorneys which led misguided persons to take foolish action.

His revelation imediately brought Defense Attorney Harry Sacher to his feet. Sacher told the court that the defense attorneys, the 11 Communist leaders and their wives and children also had received threatening letters as a result of the publicity attending the trial.

The remarks came as the trial was droning on with the testimony of a Negro college professor, Dr. Doxey Wilkerson, who prepared a statistical survey which, the defense contends, shows that Negroes, Jews, women, and minority groups are discriminated against in picking jurors.

Wilkerson said he had made extensive studies of the life of Negroes in America. He said he formerly taught at Virginia State College at Ettrick, Va., and Howard University in Washington.

The witness testified he formerly served as educational director of the Communist Party in Maryland and the District of Columbia.

[According to Howard University, Wilkerson was a member of the faculty from 1935 until 1942 and was an associate professor of education at the time of his departure.

[He left Howard in 1942 to become an education specialist with the Office of Price Administration. He resigned from the OPA in June, 1943, a few weeks after he passed his thirty-eighth birthday.

[He joined the Communist Party the same day he resigned from the OPA and was designated party organizer and educational director in Baltimore and Washington. He subsequently moved to New York to become editor of People's Voice.—Editor's Note].

Canadian Red's Home, Offices Are Padlocked for a Year

Montreal, Que., Jan. 28 (AP).—A padlock law was invoked today to close the home and offices of a Communist leader after police raiders seized a truckload of documents there.

The Communist, John Switzman, his wife and 20-month-old daughter were ordered out. Under the padlock law, which Premier Maurice L. Duplessis has used a dozen times in the past, the premises will be closed for a year.

Special Officer Paul Benoit declined to say whether the raid here was in connection with the arrest of Sam Carr, seized in New York after a 3-year hunt on charges that he figured in Canada's atomic spy ring.

"You can draw your own conclusions," he said.

Justice Dept.-House Spy Unit Cooperation Seen in Carr Case

NYHT News Service

A new era of cooperation between the Department of Justice and the House Committee on Un-American Activities appeared to be in the making yesterday.

It was learned that Alex Campbell, Assistant Attorney General, has about decided to grant the committee's request for the appearance as a witness of Sam Carr, the Canadian spy ring figure arrested Thursday in New York.

As of last night, indications were that the department will cooperate in making Carr available for subpena if it can be done without interference with plans to return him to Canada or to question him elsewhere.

If Mr. Carr does appear before the committee, it will be in closed session, in the first instance, at least, and a decision then will be made whether to question him in public hearing.

It is understood also that the committee has asked Campbell to meet with it in closed session early next week.

That meeting will be for the purpose of organizing the committee's work and developing a code of ethics and operation.

First Loyalty Firing Suit Filed

and she has never received such information.

While this law applies to security of the military and naval forces, State Department and Central Intelligence Agency, the Deak case may also affect the Government's over-all loyalty program, for in both instances "national security" has been stated as a basis for withholding detailed loyalty-security charges.

Young said he is in no way challenging the right of the Government to probe employes' loyalty.

Following Miss Deak's dismissal, her suit states, she was first denied any further action, but later was granted a hearing here on August 5 before the Army Security Review Board.

Pays Own Expenses

Miss Deak said she was forced to pay her own expenses to Washington and could not bring any witnesses from St. Louis in her behalf because no expenses were provided. At a 2½-hour hearing, she said, she was asked numerous questions, but given no indication as to the basis of the charges. The board upheld her dismissal.

Active in basketball and other sports, Miss Deak is one of three children of American-born parents, and she gave the following information about her family:

Her father is a truck driver in Jermyn, a small coal-mining town near Scranton. A brother, John E. Deak, jr., 21, has served in the Army for four years and is now stationed in Germany as a sergeant in an ordnance unit.

She willingly signed all loyalty statements submitted to her, she said. "I have nothing against the loyalty program. But I want my name cleared; and my job back. I certainly do not think I have been given a fair deal."

Affidavits which accompanied her suit contained character references from 12 persons, including a Scranton judge, a county commissioner, justice of the peace at Jermyn, and teachers at the school where she was graduated with honors in 1943.

D. C. Loyalty Group Asks Probe Be Dropped, Finds Checkup Would Be Futile, Too Costly

The possibility of finding a disloyal employe in the District government is so slim, it is impractical to set up complicated and expensive machinery for checking all workers, the Commissioners were told yesterday.

The city heads were handed a five-page report submitted by the District's Loyalty Committee, headed by Daniel M. Maher, special assistant corporation counsel.

The eight-man group said that based on the experience of the Federal Government, preliminary investigations of the District's 18,000 workers would probably uncover sufficient suspicious reports on nine persons to warrant a field investigation. And on the same basis, not one of the nine would be charged.

The report then noted that "there is now in existence adequate legal machinery for the removal of disloyal persons from the District of Columbia government" and that "the personnel of the District government and its organization are such that the identity of any disloyal person would soon become known."

It, therefore, recommended unanimously that "the proposed investigation of persons occupying positions of a 'sensitive' nature be abandoned." This in effect, would wipe out the committee.

The committee was appointed last spring by the Commissioners after the Federal Government launched its loyalty checking plan. Members are Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young; School Supt. Hobart M. Corning; Lieut. Col. Carlin Whitesell, assistant engineer commissioner; Geoffrey M. Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners; Donald M. Clemmer, director, Department of Corrections; Inspector Floyd A. Truscott, assistant superintendent of police; Victor A. Howard, secretary, District Personnel Board, and Maher.

Held Not Necessary

After deciding an individual check of employes was not necessary, the committee asked the Commissioners to survey their departments to determine what positions were "sensitive" to security.

The report revealed that Commissioner John Russell Young listed 2,619 workers, consisting of all police and fire department personnel; Commissioner Guy Mason named five posts and Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, about 500.

The committee chairman, Maher, then met with Federal officials to discuss their experience. They explained two types of investigations used in the loyalty program:

1. "Name and record check," which involved comparing fingerprints and names of employes with existing records in the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Central Intelligence Agency House, Un-American Activities Committee, U. S. Navy Intelligence and similar groups.

Of 2,332,406 names checked by FBI through October 18, 1948, "derogatory information" was found in 275 cases or .003 of the total.

2. These cases were subjected to a "full field investigation," consisting of a search of the individual's "personal history in recent years, such as checking prior places of employment, his associates, his activities in subversive activities, etc."

Of the 7275 checked, 1317 charges were filed against incumbent employes or "interrogatories" were issued to prospective employes involved. This meant that "five persons out of 10,000 investigated" were subjected to such action.

At this rate, the District probe could be expected to turn up nine cases requiring a field investigation and "not one would be charged," the report stated.

It further pointed out that the first type check costs an average of $9.90 per person and a full field investigation averages about $167 each.

Farm Statesmanship

The board of directors of the American Farm Bureau Federation have reaffirmed their intention to support the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1948 providing for flexible price supports for basic farm products. In face of strong opposition from Southern delegates, the Farm Bureau Convention had previously voted to support the present long-range program, but had requested the board of directors to consider a proposal to raise minimum supports on basic crops to 90 per cent of parity when marketing quotas are in effect. With the rejection of this proposal the Farm Bureau emerges as a firm and unequivocal supporter of a system of flexible and reasonable, instead of high and rigid, price supports.

The effect of the 90 per cent of parity formula in encouraging overproduction is already reflected in the mounting volume of stored surpluses held under Government loan and purchase agreements. The costs to the Government, and the economic waste involved in such operations would result eventually in a collapse of the price support system in the absence of rigid production controls. And, as the Farm Bureau points out, rigid systems for restricting output "in the end take away from farmers' incomes through decreased volume as much as, or more than, they add through increased prices." Furthermore, there is no assurance that the effort to control production will prove effective.

Certainly reductions in acreage are no guarantee that output will decline correspondingly. For under the stimulus of high price supports, yields per acre have risen amazingly. To sum up: rigid systems of price support lead inevitably to a regimentation of agriculture that deprives the farmer of freedom of initiative, without any assurance that forced adjustments in production will enable him to make the best use of his land and insure him an adequate over-all income.

Reciprocal Trade

Extension of the reciprocal trade program without the hampering procedural changes voted by the Eightieth Congresss is urged by President Truman so as to facilitate negotiations with a number of countries not parties to the comprehensive agreements concluded in the fall of 1947. The present one-year arrangement is designedly obstructive. It superseded a system that put representatives of interested executive departments in the key position in negotiation of trade agreements, with the Tariff Commission functioning as a participating agency ready to advise and inform other committee members. Since that system had proved its worth, its restoration would insure vigorous action in extending the reciprocal trade program. The broad objectives of this program are to expand and develop foreign markets for our products and to make it possible to retain such markets by encouraging an increase of imports to pay for our exports. A narrowly nationalistic policy overemphasizing the need for protection of domestic industry would defeat that purpose by restricting imports and forcing other countries to limit their purchases of American goods.

It would be a mistake, however, to overestimate the importance that trade pacts calling for reciprocal reductions in tariff duties and the ending of other restrictions have at the present time in stimulating an expansion of our export trade. For at present exports are being maintained at high levels by gifts and loans from the American people. And imports into the United States are restricted primarily because of the limited surplus productive capacity of trading nations—not because of tariff barriers. Nevertheless, the time will come when foreign aid will cease to be a sustaining factor insofar as our export trade is concerned, and when foreign nations will be seeking larger market outlets for greater surpluses. When that time comes—and it should not be far distant—the benefits of trade agreements providing for freer interchange of goods will become apparent. Their value will be reflected not merely in the removal of trade barriers that unnecessarily impede goods interchange but in the existence of a system of trade agreements that enables the United States to obtain as well as grant concessions.

In other words, the reciprocal trade program provides the United States with a bargaining weapon with which to penetrate foreign trade barriers imposing obstacles to our own trade expansion. It is axiomatic that we cannot continue indefinitely to sell more to foreign countries than we buy from them. It is equally obvious that we cannot hope to break down the barriers to a sustained volume of export trade unless we remove or at least lower the barriers that prevent an expansion of our imports. The system put into effect by the Eightieth Congress will not serve that purpose. Under it the Tariff Commission is required to establish so-called "peril points" intended to serve as warning signals to negotiators that further tariff cuts would endanger domestic industries. Moreover, the commission as well as the interdepartmental committee is required to hold hearings and report to the President—a proceeding resulting in duplication of effort and unnecessary delays.

Family Quarrel

The extraordinary degree of heat and acrimony which was engendered over the reelection of Representative Hugh Scott, jr., of Pennsylvania, as chairman of the Republican National Committee serves to illustrate some of the peculiarities of the American political system. The opposition, which would have defeated Mr. Scott with another five votes, arose partly from the fact that he was the personal choice of Governor Dewey, partly from his conduct of Mr. Dewey's recent campaign, and partly from the position he has taken on certain issues which are a matter of much controversy within the party itself.

On the first point it is felt that Governor Dewey, having twice received the nomination to the Presidency, and having been twice defeated, should now relinquish any claim to leadership of the party. On the second point Mr. Scott is blamed for the overconfidence among Mr. Dewey's advisers which, it is felt, cheated the party of its anticipated victory last November. Whether justly or not, Mr. Scott is held responsible for the negative and passive campaign policy, whereby Messrs. Dewey and Warren confined themselves in their speeches to vague and pious generalities, hoping thereby to profit to the full by dissatisfactions and divisions among the Democrats. On the final point there is the belief among a large element of the Republicans that the duty of opposition party is to oppose, and that it can perform this duty better under a chairman who does not see eye-to-eye with the Truman Administration on so many matters.

What all this means is that the Republican Party is not a political party in the sense that it represents a particular political philosophy or clearly defined attitude on important public questions. Rather it is, like the Democratic Party, a loose working alliance of disparate elements for purposes of patronage and the exploitation of traditional loyalties. In this sense it resembles the parliamentary coalitions which are formed for the purposes of government in continental European countries where the parliaments are chosen according to some system of proportional representation which assures a voice to each minority. In other words, all the negotiations, compromises and divisions of preferment in Europe which take place among parties after an election takes place here in advance of elections among the various factions within the party itself. Thus the electorate chooses, not between disparate and sharply defined policies, but between sets of compromises.

The American system also differs from the two-party system of Great Britain in some important particulars. For one thing, the victory of one of the two national parties in both the electoral college and in the Congress does not necessarily assure the enactment of the party's legislative program. A member of the British Parliament who wishes to vote against the government on an important question, must "cross the House," that is, must transfer his allegiance from the governing party to the opposition. An American member of Congress, who belongs to the party in power, may vote against the Administration without impairing his party membership or status. This is because of the constitutional provision that members of Congress must be residents of the districts or States from which they are chosen. Thus the power of discipline over members of Congress rests in the last analysis, not with the party leaders, but with the constituencies, which in some cases may mean merely the local party machine. The failure of the late President Roosevelt's effort to expel from office and from the party Democratic Senators who had helped to defeat certain of his measures affords an example in point.

The same reasons account for the longevity of the major political parties in the United States and for the early demise of all third-party movements. Symptoms of the permanent dissolution of a major political party because of the apparently incompatible elements comprising it, are almost always deceptive; one need go no further back for an example than the predictions of the impending dissolution of the Democratic Party that were made before and after the national convention last summer. Similar predictions, of course, were made concerning the Republican Party after the rise of the Bull Moose movement in 1912.

Thus whatever the immediate consequences of the present fission within the Republican Party over the chairmanship of Mr. Scott and the undiscouraged ambitions of Governor Dewey, we may assume that the cohesive tendency in the long run will be stronger than the divisive tendencies. It is probably true, as critics often complain, that the American party system makes the political parties less responsive to public opinion; but at the same time it makes for greater political stability. The truth is that ours is the most conservative system of government now to be found anywhere in the world.

Joint Chiefs

On the surface, at least, the Joint Chiefs of Staff have done a good job of evolving a balanced defense team within the framework of the President's 1950 budget. With minor deviations, there seems to be a real effort among the armed services to make the unified budget work and to live up to the agreements reached by the Joint Chiefs. Outward appearances, however, can be deceiving; in this case the surface unity does not reflect the amount of bickering and interservice horse trading—sometimes at the expense of logical planning—that went on within the Joint Chiefs preparatory to the final compromise.

It is to this point that we wish the Hoover Commission would address itself. Reports that the commission in its final report will recommend the material strengthening of the powers of the Secretary of Defense are encouraging. The failure to come to grips specifically with this issue was one of the principal weaknesses of the Eberstadt task force report. It cannot be forgotten in this context that Mr. Eberstadt, as an author of the unification act, was largely responsible along with Secretary Forrestal for the looseness of the present organization. It would be a step forward for the Hoover Commission to advocate the abolition of separate service secretaries and the provision in their stead of undersecretaries directly responsible to the Secretary of Defense.

However, this still would not resolve another major flaw, which is the unworkability of committee administration in the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Committee administration is the genius of British government, the bane of American government. The divided authority, and the lack of coordination with other essential agencies, cannot be overcome without the appointment of a single Chief of Staff with powers of decision in the Joint Chiefs. The present system, like the U. N. Security Council, puts an altogether unwarranted premium on the veto of a nonacquiescent member.

Wheat For The World

Talks on a revised version of the defunct international wheat agreement opened on a more auspicious note Wednesday, if only because the Soviet Union and Argentina are participating in the discussions. Previously, Russia had had nothing to do with the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, which is sponsoring the 53-nation conference. Argentina had joined in the preparation of the 1948 pact, but later, in line with the economic manipulations of Peron and Miranda, declined to sign it.

Although the fizzle of the original agreement had its root in other causes—notably the failure of Congress to ratify the accord by the deadline—the defection of Russia and Argentina certainly had a lot to do with the cavalier treatment the effort received. There was a real question whether, without the support of these two major wheat producers, any attempt to stabilize supply and prices on an international scale could work. There is, of course, no guarantee that either country will approve what may be evolved now. But their initial participation, for whatever reason, is encouraging, lessening the possibility that any one country will be in a position to frustrate the agreement by dumping its surplus wheat.

As far as the United States is concerned, the principal obstacle is likely to be the demands of the importing countries, especially Britain, for a lower price scale. Under the previous pact, the United States agreed to furnish 185 million bushels of export wheat annually at a ceiling price of $2 and a minimum ranging from $1.50 to $1.10 in the fifth year. The demand for wheat in Europe and elsewhere is less acute than it was a year ago, and doubtless there will be a considerable effort to do away with the $2 ceiling. The United States, on the other hand, has a good argument in the fact that the cost of wheat production has increased despite the decline in price. Moreover, the British have just renewed their wheat contract with Canada calling for a $2 ceiling.

President Truman in his budget message requested 55.7 million dollars to be used by the Department of Agriculture in bridging the gap between the $2 export ceiling and the support price of wheat. If there is any substantial change in the agreement price, this request will be insufficient. Even at a higher cost to the Government, however, a new wheat agreement would be well worth while. The prospect of another whopping wheat crop raises a domestic surplus problem that cannot be met by internal efforts to improve diets and feed more grain to livestock. More important, however, is the world trade aspect. In wheat, as in other commodities, the tendency has been to develop bilateral trade, sometimes on a barter and/or hijacking basis, that negates all the principles of multilateralism for which we have been working. The new agreement offers a chance to halt the trend toward compartmentalization that is dividing the world economically as well as to insure stabilized and expanding markets. In all probability it is now or never for the wheat pact.

Judge Bentley's Illness

Back of the admittance of Judge Fay L. Bentley to St. Elizabeths is a human tragedy which moves us as we think it will move the community. In 1946 Judge Bentley was in an automobile accident which injured her back severely. After living in pain for some time, she had an operation last November, but got no relief, and her suffering was incessant. That she stayed at her duties as presiding judge of the Juvenile Court—except for a two-month leave of absence in the summer—till the middle of October is testimony to a courage which provoked the admiration of all who knew her condition. Now she has broken down, being in what is reported as "a state of nervous involvement." It was at her own request that she was admitted to St. Elizabeths, for she realized the shattering effect of the strain she was undergoing. Her work on the bench was conscientious and sympathetic and effective, as all social workers testify, and if a person of Judge Bentley"s caliber is chosen in her place, her successor will be worthy, indeed. In the meantime the hope will be that in good time Judge Bentley will be restored in mind and body sufficiently to enjoy the quiet and leisure that she deserves.

Von Papen's Release

The German denazification court in Germany has just "denazified" (whitewashed) Franz von Papen of his Nazi criminal record—and freed him! Such travesty of justice emerged from retrial of this "great intriguer" who, by diplomatic subterfuge, bribery, spying and sabotage, worked so hard to wreck the American system . . . Papen was an international brigand in both World Wars I and II; certainly a treacherous archenemy of all that America stands for. He double-crossed not only Germany's enemies, but likewise his own cohorts—Hitler included—when it suited his purpose.

Have certain wires been pulled—has justice been conveniently blindfolded—to make Von Papen "safe" for a projected World War III—because of his strong anti-Communist convictions?

They may throw the book at "Axis Sal," who is being currently tried in this country,—merely to make a handy example of her. But I dare say, after all pluses and minuses are appraised, that Axis Sal is very small fry compared to the wily Franz von Papen!

Federal Cafeterias

According to Jerry Kluttz's column a subcommittee has been set up to look into cafeterias operated in Federal buildings. In the meantime, Senator Baldwin is ready to introduce a bill which would provide for the establishing of a self-sustaining Government corporation to take over the operation of the facilities involved.

These actions should not only be hailed by Government employes but should be strongly advocated and supported. As a group of employes for whom every penny counts, they have a distinct interest in any plan that would result in their getting more for their dollar.

Why shouldn't such facilities be established and operated on a self-sustaining but nonprofit basis? There is nothing in the form of risk involved. There is no competition that can provide comparable convenience. The operator of such cafeterias has no rent problem. There is no lease problem. From the standpoint of operating a comparable business on commercial premises against all types of competition, it's a Roman holiday.

Hume School

The January 22 story on the Hume School situation in Arlington gives a false slant to some of the facts.

Money to replace the old building has not been available since May, 1947, as the article stated, for, while a bond issue was voted at that time, the old school board did nothing to float the issue. The newly elected school board, whose authority has recently been confirmed by a decision of the highest Virginia court, did not sell the bonds until September, 1948.

The school board last summer viewed a site on 23d st. and South Army and Navy dr. along with one at 24th, Ode, and Nash sts. After receiving the opinion of a building and engineering firm it concluded that the total cost of utilizing the land at 23d st. would not exceed the cost of acquiring and developing the site at 24th st. At this point adjacent property owners protested, the school board abandoned the 23d st. site (which the owners were willing to sell) and chose the 24th st. site (which can be acquired only through lengthy condemnation proceedings).

Funds available to the board for the acquisition of sites and the construction of new schools are limited, and local taxpayers believe that purchase of high cost land for this purpose is unwarranted when less expensive land can be procured.

Truman's Snub

It was not smallness on the part of President Truman, when he failed to recognize the Dixiecrat Governor in the inaugural parade. Very much to the contrary, it was a specific example of his courage and understanding.

Why should men, who keep our people divided, causing race hatred and bloodshed, be given the salute of men of progress?

Transit Radios

Is there no responsible agency in the District of Columbia with enough foresight and authority to prevent the Capital Transit from putting over its latest invasion of public comfort and common decency by the perpetuation of canned music and advertising "blurbs" upon its helpless paying passengers?

If the District government permits the Capital Transit Co. to turn streetcars and buses into traveling juke boxes, violating every principle of human consideration, the company should be required to take out amusement licenses for each of its vehicles, and to pay amusement taxes, like any other juke-joint proprietor.

Streetcar and bus patrons who pay for transportation are entitled to ride in peace and quiet, and to be protected by their governing agencies from arbitrary invasion of their rights and privileges. If local authorities are not prepared to safeguard such rights, injunction proceedings may be the only alternative.

CLAUDE N. PALMER.
Washington.

Whether or not the majority of bus and car riders like radios is beside the point. I do not know whether they want it or not, but even if they do, the majority has no right to force radio on the minority, since no fundamental right of the majority is involved.

German Press

This is a reply to the letter from Dr. Wilhelm Batz, former publisher of the Kasseler Post, which appeared in your December 27 issue.

The American reader is entitled to all of the facts pertaining to the independent German democratic press from 1945 on, as contrasted with conditions existing before and during the Nazi dictatorship.

Of all the newspapers published in the present United States zone of Germany prior to 1933, considerably less than one half were independent. The others were published by means of mat services, by interest or vested high-pressure groups. Whether "local papers (Heimatzeitungen)" or "general papers (Generalanzeiger)," they, sooner or later, became tools of the regime, lulling their readers into indifference to realities or racial pipe dreams. Today nobody sheds a tear for the passing of this type of "press" and it is a pity that German publicists should forget so quickly.

There is no use denying that, as a result of past experience, the German population did not readily accept the independent press at first, but now the great majority would have nothing else. The independent newspapers have gradually become almost free of restrictions and they discuss the problems of world politics as freely as policies of military government.

No sane person believes them to be tools of the occupation authorities. The independent press, however, refuses to be the sounding board of a new nationalism in democratic disguise or to demonstrate its unshackled existence by "playing the wild man." And because it does not join in the all too familiar Pied Piper's tune of propaganda and does not ally itself with would-be political charlatans, it is in a vulnerable but honorable position.

The opponents of the independent German press continue to harp on its alleged monopolistic character and its "enormous profits" and they use this misinformation to charge that the newspaper licensees are fighting the relinquishment of licensing in order to maintain their dominant position. Nothing could be further from the truth; they merely insist on legislation to safeguard the freedom of the press so that another debacle may be averted.

Why were existing printshops used for the young independent German press? Numerous plants had been destroyed by warfare. It would have been unwise to entrust former publishers and publicists with the task of reeducating the German public, for they had not given proof of democratic convictions in the past. (Frequently they had pacted with the regime to "protect their independence" only to fall prey to their own wiles; this is not democracy.)

The licensees tried to secure the use of existing printshops by voluntary agreements but they met with strong opposition by the owners, which made mandatory contracts necessary. At first they were for a period of 15 years which was later reduced to 5 years with a possible extension of 3 years. Let me say that my colleagues and I prefer voluntary agreements to mandatory contracts, but that we will not be deterred from the task entrusted to us by military government.

It is untrue that the newspaper licensees are "swimming in money." For the use of properties they pay to the owners amounts higher than they could have earned themselves, at least during the past several years. Now they even demand up to six times the sums paid heretofore.

Faced with such exorbitant demands, with greatly increased costs of materials, higher wages and a tax of about 90 per cent on profits, the German newspaper licensees have little, if any, chance to amass fortunes. Nevertheless they are leaving nothing undone to establish printshops of their own in order to terminate these lease contracts.

The independence of the German press is at stake. Under the pretext of seeking their right, the owners are trying to force the licensees to the wall. Let there be no doubt: whoever possesses the equipment is in a position to influence public opinion. Whether this responsibility is safer in the hands of licensees thoroughly investigated by military government or in the hands of owners who, in many instances, were willing to sell their birthright for momentary advantages is the point in question.

DR. JOSEPH E. DREXEL,
Licensee-Publisher Nuernberger Nachrichten.
Nuernberg, Germany

Editor's note: Under present regulations leases between licensed publishers and owners of printing plants must be concluded by January 31, 1949. These leases will protect the licensees for a minimum of five years and can be extended to a maximum of eight years. Leases which have been signed voluntarily are permitted to run for any period agreed upon by the signatories. Regulations are presently being reviewed by the State Department.

Where Women Are Going

By Malvina Lindsay

Workers' Guidepost

TWO PERSISTENT myths about the growing employment of women, especially married ones, are once again refuted in the study, Women's Occupations Through Seven Decades, by Janet M. Hooks, just issued by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

One is that women's own restlessness, desire for luxuries, and even trend to decadence are driving them to work outside the home—and thereby let their families go to pot. The other is that the woman of the past, married or single, was supported in relative idleness, and that she had no desire to "take a job."

But the steady way in which women's numerous household tasks and their opportunities for making the pin money that spelled economic self-respect were taken from them by industry is brought out strikingly in the study. It shows women slowly but inevitably following their home tasks into factory, office, store, schoolroom, hospital. Today women wage earners are largely at their traditional tasks, as domestics, teachers, nurses and working in the manufacture and distribution of clothing and food.

THE STUDY also shows that the old-time woman wasn't averse to taking a job when it opened—as mantua maker, hoop skirt maker, daguerreotypist, teacher, domestic, boarding house keeper. In 1870, when the study begins, about two million women were working, a little less than 10 per cent of the feminine population. In 1940 when it ended, about 13 million were working, nearly 20 per cent of women. Yet the female population had tripled between those years, labor saving devices had come into the home, work opportunities had opened to women, families had moved from country to city, and the household need for money rather than goods had developed.

One conclusion is apparent from the study—that such a long time powerful trend as women's entrance into the labor force is destined to continue. Hence the question: What will be its direction tomorrow? How are the social problems it develops to be met?

The Women's Bureau study does not look into the future other than to suggest that some of the new trails opened to women by World War II, as aircraft, the armed forces, the plastic industries are likely to be further feminized. It also seems likely women will make further inroads into those professions in which they are now listed as weak; namely, preaching, architecture, law, medicine. The trend of married women to work outside the home also seems to be firmly entrenched.

THIS LAST trend especially has raised problems relating to family life. Nearly every day some writer or speaker charges working mothers with being responsible for juvenile delinquency, broken homes, unstable family life. Even historian Arnold Toynbee is credited with pointing out that in all deteriorating civilizations women have left the home.

Recently Dr. J. Kockebakker, head of the Mental Health Division of the Institute for Preventive Medicine of Leyden, Holland, said that "female labor" was the central problem with which industrial society had been struggling since its origin, and no solution had been found. And much discussion is now centered on the problem of "psychological fatigue" of the woman who must carry on the demanding double job of homemaker and wage earner.

Yet women have had their social problems in all eras. The pioneer woman had to cope with far more than psychological fatigue. Many a nineteenth century woman suffered from economic servitude and the lifetime humiliation of having no money of her own. Many an old-time family, with both mother and father constantly around, was a breeding ground for neurotics and a stage for parental despotism. And no records are available on the many unhappy old-time adolescents who ran away from home to go "out West."

Whatever the problems of today, or tomorrow that grow out of women's wage earning, they will have to be faced, understood and assessed. For the course of economic and social change cannot be deflected. The Women's Bureau study shows there is no use sighing for the time when women supposedly did nothing but rock and make antimacassers.

Calling Washington

Senility Among The Republicans

OMAHA, Nebr.—What is being bravely said in the aftermath of this Republican dogfight is that the party must still have life in it if it can stir the kind of passion and fury heard here this week.

Childs

While this has a certain validity, it is at the same time hard to see how any organization so torn by feuds and factionalism can reshape itself in a new and vigorous fashion. After that close vote of 54 to 50 in favor of Chairman Hugh Scott, Scott's critics were predicting that in six months there would be another showdown and then the victory would belong to them.

"Candidates come and candidates go, but this committee goes on forever," said Jacob France, National Committeeman from Maryland, as he introduced the resolution to remove Scott as chairman.

As two or three speakers had the candor to suggest, that may be the thing chiefly wrong with the party. The national committee today has the look of a permanent receivership for an institution tottering on the edge of bankruptcy.

The last time I saw the figure, which was some years ago, the average age of members of the committee was well over 60 and it must be considerably above that now. With few exceptions they have come out of the remote past, bringing with them utterly unchanged the ideas of the past.

Yet, no one proposed what was the only logical way out of the dead end to which the party has come. That would be for the entire committee to resign.

FOR IF Chairman Scott was guilty of losing an election, and that was the principal crime alleged against him, this same committee is guilty of losing five elections. These are the same men and women who went through the Hoover, Landon and Willkie campaigns and the first and second Dewey contests. They are permanently frozen into that tableau of the retreat from Moscow.

Yet, out of a deep sense of frustration, many committee members were interested only in finding a scapegoat for last November. As they drummed Wendell Willkie out of the party for his failure, so they wanted, out of a double-distilled bitterness, to read Scott and, through him, Thomas E. Dewey out of the Grand Old Party.

What became increasingly apparent as passion boiled beneath the surface was that the Scott-Dewey opposition had nothing positive or constructive to unite around. The best they could do was to turn back to Roy E. Dunn of Minnesota or Ralph F. Gates of Indiana, who represent the rural Midwestern part of the era of the party's victories.

In the long, unhappy debate some speakers recommended that a little soul-searching by the committee itself was in order. One of them was a woman, Mrs. Consuelo Northrop Bailey, National Committeewoman from Vermont.

MRS. BAILEY began with something like an apology. She said she had been a member only 13 years and had waited all that time to speak her mind. With this preamble she read to her colleagues—in good old Vermont common sense—a much-needed lecture about self-examination.

Yet most of the committee, steeped in ancient habit, weary and disillusioned, did not seem to recognize that need. The composition of the committee is in itself a sign of how far removed it is from the mass of the voters in the great cities who decide national elections.

There are only two Negro members and they are from Mississippi. In the long Republican tradition of the hand-picked delegates whose votes are bartered for, no single name reflects the city voters of Italian, Polish, Irish or Slavic origins. Here are the names of the old minority who once dominated politics as well as business and finance.

In the face of the angry attacks directed at him, Scott conducted himself with quiet dignity and thereby won friends and admirers. He is not at all the conventional type of politician, which may be one reason the old-timers distrust him.

But as one of his defenders pointed out, he is the only World War II veteran on the committee. If he had been tossed out here, veterans and younger voters would have taken it as a sign that they were not wanted in the Republican Party.

As Dewey well understood in the campaign, it was precisely the younger voters who have been alienated. If Scott can reconcile a 54-to-50 division within his committee and begin to win back the younger generation, then he will have proof that the GOP is alive and not merely in a state of quarrelsome senility.

It Might as Well Be Spring . . .

Republican Hopes

By Mark Sullivan

Implications Of China's Fall

THE MEETING of the Republican National Committee at Omaha this week dealt almost wholly with a not very vital matter of intra-party organization, a controversy over choosing a chairman of the national committee. In what went out through news channels, there was little to impress the public with much beyond lack of party morale and selfconfidence.

Sullivan

This is an epitome of the Republican situation ever since the November election, nothing very important to the public taking place within the party, and the public not giving much thought to it. It is the opposition party, but not an opposition party eagerly on its toes for fray ahead—in this case the congressional elections next year and the presidential one in 1952. It has had the downcast appearance of a party that had been 14 years out of power, that had made a strong start back in the congressional elections of 1946, that confidently expected to complete the comeback in the presidential election last November—but instead got such a blow as has rarely if ever been experienced before by either party. The Republicans have been dazed, not so much by the degree of their defeat, which was really not great, as by the utter unexpectedness of it.

In this condition—confused uncertainty within the party, indifference to it on the part of the public, and elated confidence on the part of the party in power—there took place an event which must drastically change the political picture. When the fall of China to communism is fully grasped; when there is understanding of its causes and its consequences, especially to us in our relation to Russia and communism; when it is seen as the climax of a long course of policy and action by our own Government, our people are likely to be deeply moved and to express themselves politically. Such political consequences as follow cannot avoid being detrimental to the party that was in power when the fall of China and the events leading up to it took place.

During some two years, beginning after late 1946, the United States under the Truman Administration has become the spearhead of resistance to the attempt of Russia and communism at world domination, the head and front of one side in a world conflict. This has had the complete approval of our people, including support by the opposition party for a bipartisan policy. Our people have not merely seen the only safety for our own Nation to lie in resisting Russian and Communist aggression, they have taken pride in our role of head contender against communism throughout the world, have given heart to the fight and vast amounts of goods and money to carry it on.

In the world conflict we have now suffered an extreme reverse. We have seen further that we have ourselves been a large cause of the reverse. Preceding the period of resistence to Russia, there was a prior period, reaching back into the Roosevelt Administration, in which our policy was one of strong friendliness to Russia. During that period President Roosevelt, at the Yalta Conference in early 1945, made agreements with Stalin by which Russia at the end of the war got territory and other advantages at the expense of China. From that territory and with these advantages came impetus and headway for the Communist drive that has now gone on to overthrow of the Chinese government.

In most countries, when serious reverse is suffered in a conflict having in any serious degree an aspect of war, actual or potential, the tendency is to reject the party in power at the next ensuing election. Another tendency is to turn out the party in power at the first election following a war, as in the English defeat of Churchill and the Conservatives at the end of the recent war, and our country's defeat of the Democrats following the First World War.

By this tendency of peoples and these precedents, the Democrats and President Truman should have been defeated last November. The many predictions of defeat were sound enough as an interpretation of history. In any thorough examination of the reasons Mr. Truman was not defeated, it is not merely a loose "if" to suggest that if the fall of China had taken place last September the outcome of the election might have been different. By the same token, the fall of China that has now taken place is a foreboding omen to the party in power in the congressional elections next year.

D. C. Landlords Deny Any Part In 'Tulsa Plan'

Organized building owners here denied yesterday that they plan a landlords' "strike" against rent controls as members of Congress denounced the "strike" plan that originated in Tulsa, Okla.

The local rent control office said there was no evidence of such a move here and James E. Douglass, president of the Building Owners and Managers Association of Metropolitan Washington, declared his organization would take part in no such scheme.

"We assure our tenants," said Douglass, "that no such eviction protesting rent controls will be attempted by any of our members."

Members of the association control more than 10,000 apartment rentals.

Meanwhile, Republican and Democratic members of Congress both denounced the strike threat as "a most extraordinary and shameful performance," and Tighe Woods, who administers the Federal rent control program, said the offices of the Housing Administrator "will seek to enjoin such evictions by action in the courts."

In Tulsa, Okla., a cradle of the eviction movement, landlords appeared to be a house divided, as the Tulsa Real Estate Board repudiated the movement started by the Tulsa Property Owners' Association as "the Tulsa Plan."

According to word received by the national rent control office here, Joe F. Haines, head of the board, said "the Tulsa Real Estate Board is not in any way affiliated with the Tulsa Property Owners' Association, and we doubt if there are any members in common."

Haines said the board would seek rent increases by legal means.

At the national rent control office, a spokesman said "no reputable landlords' organization approves mass evictions."

The Rev. Wallace J. Murphy, executive secretary of the Tulsa Property Owners' Association and a retired Baptist minister, has asked a Senate investigation of what he called "high-handed and undemocratic tactics" of the Office of the Housing Expediter, the Associated Press reported from Tulsa.

12-Inch Snow Clamps Block On Nebraska

Omaha, Jan. 28 (AP).—A death-dealing succession of snowstorms and blizzards dating back to last November today plunged Nebraska into what one official termed the worst "human distress and misery" of a disastrous season.

New snows ranging up to 12 inches in Omaha clamped an almost total snowblock on the State. At least a dozen towns lacked electrical power. Other towns had their only communication with the outside by radio.

"We don' face a crisis today, tomorrow or a week from tomorrow," said Andy Clark of O'Neill. Our crisis began a month ago."

A member of the Holt County Board of Supervisors, he spoke for an area typical of approximately one third of Nebraska.

"The farmers and ranchers in Holt County haven't seen the ground since November 18," he said. Since that time more than 63 inches of snow have fallen. Hundreds of families are completely isolated. They have not been heard from for weeks.

"Christmas mail is piled high in postoffices.

"There is hunger and starvation. These stricken people can't even scavenge for foodstuffs. Within a short distance from O'Neill four people have perished in the snow in the past nine days.

"Gov. Val Peterson has declared an emergency. We feel he has done what he could do. An American Red Cross representative has arrived and is doing everything possible. This is not enough."

Governor Peterson today wired President Truman for help.

Patterson Will Case Settled

the suit out of court, on September 7, and presumably there have been several efforts at settlement since then. Attorneys for the executors, however, have repeatedly declared that they were eager to have the case go to trial, and strongly emphasized that the will represented Mrs. Patterson's sane and deliberate judgment.

William A. Roberts, Mrs. Gizycka's attorney, on November 30 disclosed that the September 7 settlement attempt was made. At that time, he said the conversations were terminated by the other side.

Break Was Imminent

Mrs. Gizycka 43-year-old former wife of Columnist Drew Pearson, was in an adjoining office yesterday when the agreement statement was being released, but left before reporters could talk to her. Roberts said she was returning to her New York home.

Reporters have suspected for several days that something unusual was about to break in the will fight.

Mrs. Gizycka's attorneys had been busy for weeks with the taking of pretrial depositions from prospective witnesses. On Tuesday, however, without explanation, they cancelled depositions scheduled for later this week.

Of possible major significance is the fact that the last depositions taken were one on January 20, when Mrs. Gizycka's attorneys questioned Attorney Louis G. Caldwell, and another on Monday when they questioned Mrs. Sibilla Campbell, executive housekeeper for Mrs. Patterson, and Mrs. Kay O. McCarter, one-time personal secretary to Mrs. Paterson.

Mrs. Campbell, questioned for 8½ hours on Monday, was named as executrix of the estate of the late Charles Bell Porter, former Times-Herald treasurer and one-time financial adviser to Mrs. Patterson.

On September 14, the day after the will challenge was filed in District Court here, Porter leaped to his death from a Clarksburg, W. Va., hotel room window.

Porter was named in the original will as one of the newspaper executives to share in the Times-Herald, but a codicil struck him from that bequest. The fact that he was not in Mrs. Patterson's employ at the time of her death prevented him from receiving a separate $5000 bequest.

The same day Porter died, Miss Elizabeth K. (Betty) Hines, Times-Herald society editor, was found dead in her Georgetown home. Porter's death was declared a suicide and Miss Hines' death was attributed to natural causes.

7 Earlier Wills Found

On October 29, seven additional wills executed earlier by Mrs. Patterson were reported found, and were filed here. These showed that as late as 1942, Mrs. Gizycka was bequeathed the bulk of her mother's estate.

The contested will, executed in 1946, reduced this to $25,000 a year for life for Mrs. Gizycka, plus Mrs. Patterson's estate at Port Washington, N. Y., real estate in North Dakota, and certain personal property.

The Times-Herald was bequeathed to William C. Shelton, general manager of the newspaper; Frank C. Waldrop, editor-in-chief; Edmund F. Jewell, advertising director; Michael W. Flynn, managing editor; H. A. Robinson, circulation director, J. Irving Belt, mechanical superintendent, and Mason S. Peters, night managing editor.

Executors of the estate are Shelton, Waldrop and Joseph Brooks of New York.

Despite the fact that the will set up provisions to pay Mrs. Gizycka $25,000 a year, her attorneys told Judge Alexander Holtzoff on January 14 that she might not receive this in actuality, because of heavy taxes on the estate.

They estimated that Federal taxes alone would "eat up" some $10,500,000 of the estate, and would also preclude any estate "balance" to be distributed to charity, as specified in the will.

Council to Urge Tax Appeals Court Tuesday

Creation of a tax appeals court for Montgomery County will be proposed at the public meeting of the Montgomery County Council Tuesday in Rockville.

The decision to propose such a court was reached at a private session of the council Thursday night.

No action can be taken at the private council meetings, which are for discussion purpose only.

Three members appointed by the council would constitute the court which would have final authority in all assessment and tax appeals.

The court would conduct hearings instead of the County Council. The former County Commissioners held such hearings themselves and receiving $10 a day pay.

Pipe for AEC Plant Gas Line Approved

The Office of Industry Cooperation yesterday announced approval of allocation of 25,500 tons of 22-inch steel line pipe to the East Tennessee Natural Gas Co.

The pipe will be used for a natural gas line from a point near Mitchellville, Tenn., to the Atomic Energy Commission plant at Oak Ridge.

Arkansas members of Congress and State officials had protested allocation on the ground it would delay pipe for a gas line to the Lake Catherine steam power plant which will supply power to the Reynolds Metals Co.'s big Jones Mill (Ark.) plant.

More Snow Lashes West

els already at work in the Nebraska storm area.

There were a few bright spots in the blizzard picture.

Ten more C-82 Flying Boxcars joined the Nevada haylift, where feed has been dumped to stranded herds the last several days. Ranchers predicted that two more days of aerial feeding might see them through.

In Utah, the major "catastrophe area" where 1,200,000 sheep and cattle are snowbound, rising temperatures cheered ranchers. Food supplies were trucked to virtually all stranded herds.

In South Dakota more than 1000 disaster workers and 114 bulldozers were fighting mountainous snowdrifts. Trucks loaded with food, fuel and livestock feed followed the bulldozers and about 75 private planes equipped with skis were pressed into service.

The Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. estimated January damage from sleet already has cost $7,500,000. Some 33,000 telephones were out of service, 14,000 in Dallas, Tex., alone.

Southwestern Bell reported 90 communities isolated; more than 2000 toll circuits out, 8331 poles down, 12,282 pole crossarms broken, 85,000 wire breaks and 4000 employes engaged in storm repair work.

Iowans battled the State's worst winter storm that isolated communities, disrupted communications and blocked highways.

Up to 12 inches of new snow had fallen on the State, and winds up to 35 miles per hour were whipping it into road-blocking drifts.

Britain Agrees to Buy More U. S. Tobacco

London Jan. 28 (AP).—Britain agreed today to buy more American tobacco in 1949, barring any "substantial adverse change" in general Anglo-American trading.

The Board of Trade announced the decision after five days of negotiations with the United States Department of Agriculture here. It gave no figures. It said only that "more" tobacco would be bought than was bought in 1948.

Worst Arizona Snowstorm Perils 10,000 Navajo Indians

By Rick Raphael

Albuquerque Journal Staff Writer

Winslow, Ariz., Jan. 28 (AP).—All of the northwestern section of Arizona resembles an Antarctic waste and in the area more than 10,000 Navajo Indians are facing destitution from the worst snowstorms in Arizona history.

Three times yesterday I flew with Air Force pilots in an attempt to reach the most critical locale on the Indian reservation, the Navajo Mountain Indian School. On the third trip in, this time in a Kirtland Field B-25 piloted by Kirtland's commanding officer, Col. Harold R. Gunn, we managed to reach the edge of Navajo Mountain. But wind-whipped ice fogs and snow clouds drove us back.

We left the school community of 60 children and a half dozen Indian service workers facing their sixth day of isolation from the outside world.

From Winslow, northward it looked like another world completely blanketed in snow.

Attorney Reveals Letters Praise 'Sally' Broadcasts

James J. Laughlin, attorney for Miss Mildred E. Gillars, known as "Axis Sally" during wartime broadcasts from Berlin, said yesterday he had received more than 100 letters from parents of former soldiers praising the broadcasts for giving news of their sons.

Miss Gillars, on trial in District Court for treason, faces a possible death penalty if convicted. The trial was recessed Thursday until Monday.

Next phase of the proceedings will include testimony from performers who are alleged to have appeared on programs with Miss Gillars in which she portrayed the mother of a Yank killed aboard a torpedoed ship.

The Gallup Poll

Many Parts of 'Fair Deal' Meet Wide Public Acceptance

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 28.—President Truman's "Fair Deal" is off to a favorable start so far as public sentiment is concerned.

His program, as outlined in his State of the Union message January 5, may run into serious snags in Congress, but many of the parts of it which have thus far been covered by public opinion surveys seem to have wide appeal to the voters. The chief exception are parts of the civil rights program.

Below is the record of polls conducted thus far: Other Truman "Fair Deal" proposals will be dealt with in forthcoming surveys.

1. Minimum wage. Boosting the minimum wage from the present 40c an hour to 75c is approved by 68 per cent of voters polled, while 25 per cent are opposed and 7 per cent express no opinion.

2. Federal aid to education. The proposal for a 300 million dollar Federal grant to schools is approved by 43 per cent of voters, while 33 per cent favor leaving it up to the States and 24 per cent express no opinion.

3. Housing. The President's ideas on Federal aid to housing are popular but attitudes are conditioned about the question of cost. Two-thirds of the voters polled by the Institute, or 69 per cent, favor government aid for slum clearance and low rent housing, but only a little more than half would be willing to pay higher taxes for this purpose.

4. Civil rights. The abolition of poll taxes is favored by the majority of voters, including the South as a whole, the national sentiment being 69 per cent in favor of doing away with the tax in those States where it is still in force while 21 per cent want to see the tax retained and 10 per cent express no opinion.

The anti-Jim Crow feature of the civil rights program is supported by 49 per cent throughout the Nation, opposed by 43 per cent in the Institute polling, while 8 per cent gave no opinion. Southern white voters are 5-to-1 in favor of retaining segregation between colored and white in public conveyances.

A total of 43 per cent think the Federal Government should step in in lynching cases while 44 per cent want the handling of lynch cases left up to States and 13 per cent have no opinion.

The President's plan for a fair employment practices commission with powers to curb race or color discrimination in employment gets a mixed reception nationally. A total of 42 per cent of voters want the Federal Government to push this program, while 44 per cent think the Government should stay out of the issue and 14 per cent express no opinion. The Southern white vote is heavily against a Federal FEPC.

On the general question of whether Congress should pass the civil rights program as a whole, the poll finds sentiment closely divided, with a small margin in favor among those expressing opinions.

5. Social Security. Extending the Social Security Act to include people not now covered (farmers, domestic servants, professional and self-employed persons, Government workers and others) is approved. Voter attitudes were polled concerning each group, and the majorities favoring coverage under Social Security ranged from 54 per cent up to 70 per cent.

Congress Seen Taxing Profits Of Co-ops

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—Prospects are good that legislation will pass requiring co-operatives to pay taxes and quit "piling up millions of dollars of capital" used to buy out their competitors, a speaker said today.

Joseph F. Leopold, executive secretary of the National Tax Equality Association, Dallas, said the interpretation the Eighty-first Congress puts on patronage dividends may determine whether the free enterprise system survives.

He spoke at a luncheon of the Virginia Farm Equipment Association at Hotel Roanoke.

Patronage dividends are refunds made to co-op members by issuing stock at the end of the year on money made over and above expenses, a spokesman for a local co-op said.

Mr. Leopold thinks there is a good chance Congress will provde for taxation of cooperatives because governmental expenses are rising so high the tax on profits resulting from the 17-billion-dollar co-op business "is a very attractive sum."

Hope to Stay on NBC

Philadelphia, Jan. 28 (AP).—Comedian Bob Hope said today he has no plans to shift radio networks. "I'm going to remain the lone ranger of NBC," quipped Hope.

Gallup Replies To Truman's Poll Criticism

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—George Gallup, replying to a comment of President Truman, today defended public opinion polls as "one of the most useful instruments of democracy ever devised."

The President, whose defeat in the November election was predicted by the Gallup Poll, said in a statement "I have the greatest admiration for President Truman because he fights for what he believes. I propose to do the same thing.

"As long as public opinion is important in this country and until someone finds a better way of appraising it, I intend to go right ahead with the task of reporting the opinions of the people on issues vital to their welfare.

"I am confident that historians of the future will regard the public opinion poll as one of the most useful instruments of democracy ever devised."

Sen. Vandenberg's Wife To Leave Hospital

3 Instructors Appointed at Jewish College

Appointment of three new instructors at the College of Jewish Studies was announced yesterday by Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, dean of the college.

They are Murray Frank, Washington correspondent for the Anglo-Jewish and Israeli press, who will teach courses on the rise of modern Israel; Rabbi Nathan Gaynor, spiritual leader of Agudas Achim Synagogue, Alexandria, who will head the Hebrew department of the college, and D. Lawrence Marwick, chief librarian of the Hebraic section of the Semitic division of the Library of Congress, who will lecture on modern Yiddish and Hebraic literature.

In announcing the appointments, Rabbi Metz said the college has received an enrollment "exceeding the most optimistic expectations." Organized in the fall by a group of Jewish leaders in Washington, the college offers the degree of Chaver, or Fellow in Jewish Studies, after completion of a four-year course.

Enrollment during the first semester was about 75 and is expected to be doubled during the second term, which begins February 7. Rabbi Metz said he hoped the additional faculty members would help the college meet the growing demand for its courses.

The school has been meeting temporarily at Hillel House, 2129 F st. nw., but officials hope to obtain regular quarters by fall.

Courses to be offered during the next semester include: Basic Hebrew, the Bible as Living Literature, Great Books, a Survey of Jewish History, the Rise of Modern Israel, and the Background and Ideals of Jewish Prayer.

2 Catholics Deny Charge by Oxnam

Two Catholic spokesmen denied yesterday charges of Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam that the Roman Catholic Church is trying to breach the constitutional guarantee separating church and state.

Answering the Bishop's statement that the Catholic Church has launched a "full-scale attack upon the principle of separation of church and state," the Very Rev. Msgr. John S. Spence, director of education in the Archdiocese of Washington, said:

"No attack whatever has been launched on this constitutional principle embodied in the First Amendment. We are not assaulting any constitutional principle when we ask that public and parochial school children of all denominations be included in Government-initiated public welfare programs.

"The United States Supreme Court, in the Everson decision, established the constitutionality of free bus rides for all school children. It is not conceivable that anyone would challenge the constitutionality of health services."

Monsignor Spence described as "false" the bishop's statement that the Catholic Church is "opposed to our system of public education" and declared Catholic taxpayers help support public schools.

He said the assertion that the church seeks to drain "vast sums" of money from the public treasury to help support parochial schools is "nonsense" and that bus rides and health services for parochial school pupils would amount to not more than 1 per cent of the total spent annually on the public school system.

William H. Collins, Washington attorney and president of the Charles Carroll Forum, replied:

"As a taxpayer I think children are entitled to such benefits. As a Catholic and a lawyer, I know my faith, I know the law, and I know my rights. And, again, as a Catholic, I know that my church has no desire to change the traditional relationships maintaining between church and state in this country.

"When I appeal for school services for Catholic children, I am convinced, with my fellow Catholics, that I am seeking only justice."

Both Will Head State's Senate

Richardson Dolan

The evenly divided State Senate of Massachusetts—20 Republicans and 20 Democrats—yesterday elected Democratic Senator Chester A. Dolan, jr., of Boston, president of the legislative body. They chose Dolan for one year with the stipulation that Republican Senator Harris S. Richardson of Winchester will serve in 1950.

Price Index Drops Again

(100). It was 2.1 per cent below a month ago and 3.5 per cent less than the same week in 1948.

Lower prices for livestock, meats and grains were the major reason for the decline, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics which compiles the index.

The bureau said corn, barley and tallow were selling for less than the prices prevailing under OPA controls in June, 1946. It said hog and steer prices were at their lowest levels since OPA controls were lifted on livestock in November, 1946.

Cocoa prices have declined 45 per cent in two months.

Farm Prices Flatten Out

Farm prices flattened out in January after dropping 13 per cent from record levels during the latter part of 1948.

Reporting this yesterday, the Agriculture Department said the index of prices received by farmers in mid-January was 268 per cent of the 1909-14 base period. This was the same as a month earlier.

Likewise, prices paid by farmers for goods used in family living and in farm production was unchanged from mid-December. The index was 248 per cent of the 1909-14 base.

While the general price level was unchanged, there were changes in individual commodities. Slight increases were reported in prices of feed grains and hay, and sharp rises in fruit and truck crops.

14 of 1000 in Plants Laid Off in November

By the United Press

Fourteen of every 1000 workers in manufacturing plants were laid off during November, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today.

Signs Indicate Tighter Times, Plumbers Told

Warren R. Forster, vice president of the Hamilton National Bank, warned yesterday of a period of "low visibility" immediately ahead for business in the Washington area.

Addressing about 50 members of the plumbing and heating industry of Washington, Maryland and Virginia at a conference at the Hotel Statler, the banker cited several economic signs which he said must be heeded.

There are thousands of unsold houses in the Washington area, which means "someone is waiting" to be paid in every case, Forster said. Collections of all kinds have slowed up considerably here in the last few months, and in many lines a sellers' market has changed to a buyers' market, he declared.

A man of 28 years' experience in banking and finance, Forster said there is nothing alarming in the situation if the signs are heeded. Businessmen should carefully overhaul their accounting practices and go over the efficiency of their organizations, as well as make sure they are figuring their costs fully to provide a fair profit.

Yesterday's first session of the two-day conference, under the chairmanship of Carl C. Lipp, past president of the Master Plumbers Association of the District of Columbia, Inc., included talks by O. F. Erickson and W. F. Clucas of Washington.

The conference will continue this morning with a round table discussion on industry problems.

Union Signs for 3 Years At Present Pay Scale

Philadelphia, Jan. 28 (AP). — A union officer's announcement today made his employers listen twice:

"Gentlemen, we want no more money. We would like to continue the present agreement for three years," said James J. Stokes, secretary-treasurer of the union composed of about 150 truck drivers. The owners agreed.

The declaration of a three-year moratorium on wage boosts came from a section of Local 187, AFL-Teamsters Union, which has a 12-year record of calling strikes to win its demands.

Since 1937, excluding the war years, the union has struck annually for periods ranging up to a month. Members now have a weekly base pay of $75 with commissions of 10 to 18 per cent.

UMW Warns It Will Close Unsafe Mines in Maryland

The United Mine Workers threatened yesterday to close down every mine in Maryland in which they find hazardous conditions if the State does not take corrective measures.

John T. Jones of Cumberland, Md., president of the union's District 16, so advised Governor Lane in a telegram, a copy of which was made public at union headquarters here.

A union spokesman said the action was prompted by a fanhouse fire at the George M. Nethken Mine which cost the lives of five miners and a mule inside the pits. The mine employed only seven men.

Jones said he had made recommendations for improving the mine and had demanded the removal of Dr. John J. Rutledge, director of the State Bureau of Mines, and Inspector Clye Rowe.

Jones said the two officials were guilty of negligence and had refused to admit a Federal mine inspector to the hearing on the accident.

Governor Lane has appointed Assistant Attorney General Joseph D. Buscher of Maryland to head a committee to recommend improvements in the State's mine-safety law.

Jones protested in his telegram to the Governor that the commitee, with only one member representing the union, would be "stacked against" the union.

"As a proposal I would be willing to let the Federal Bureau of Mines write the mining code for the State of Maryland," Jones told Lane. "They are certainly more competent than the assistant attorney general, the senators or members of the House of Representatives.

"You as Governor of the State of Maryland and your attorney general have whitewashed these charges made by the United Mine Workers' representatives and if the hazards are not removed in the mines where they now exist in violaion of every practical method of mining, you may rest assured that as an officer of the United Mine Workers of America I will close down every mine where they exist if the government of the State of Maryland does not want to protect the lives of the men who dig and mine the coal for the State of Maryland."

At Annapolis, Governor Lane declined to comment.

Mine Operator Faces Registration Charge

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 28 (AP).—William Brashear faces a charge of failing to report the opening of his nearby Westernport coal mine where two men lost their lives Monday.

A warrant was served on the operator yesterday as he entered the Cumberland City Council chamber, where the Maryland Bureau of Mines was holding an inquiry into an explosion which killed the two workers.

The warrent charging Brashear with failing to register his operation was sworn out by Dr. John J. Rutledge, director of the bureau of mines. Hearing was set for Monday before Magistrate Peter J. Carpenti in Westernport. Conviction carries a mximum fine of $200.

GOP Renews Fire on Labor Act Proposals

Four proposed amendments to the national Fair Labor Standards Act were attacked by Republicans for a second day yesterday when William R. McComb, wage-hour administrator, appeared before the House Labor Committee to urge the changes.

The amendments call for lifting the minimum wage, now 40 cents an hour, to 75 cents; extending jurisdiction of the act; strengthening the authority of the administrator, and clearing up the question of overtime pay.

Two members of the committee, Representative Samuel McConnell (R., Pa.) and Representative Ralph Gwinn (R., N. Y.) fired numerous questions at McComb, just as they did on Thursday at Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin.

"This is a trend more and more toward centralization of authority and obliteration of State lines," McConnell said.

The Administration would subject the American economy to management from Washington because 5 per cent of the employers are chiseling, added Representative Gwinn.

Full-day hearings are scheduled before the committee Monday through Friday. Representatives of manufacturing industries are due to testify Monday; spokesmen for the labor unions will appear Tuesday.

Hockey Manager, Wife Detained, Released by Czechs

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 28 (AP).—Vernon Thomas, business manager of the touring United States amateur hockey team, and his wife were detained 30 minutes by police at Brno, Czechoslovakia, Tuesday when Mrs. Thomas was arrested after making a snapshot of her husband in the city square.

They were released with apologies, members of the team said today. The Thomases are from Baltimore, Md., where he is an official of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

The team was preparing to entrain for Bratislava, to play another game on its tour leading to the world championships at Stockholm, when the Thomases were arrested. The policeman was reproved and Brno's lord mayor, then in Prague, telephoned apologies.

Women Told to Trap Red Army Rapists

Berlin, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—The Telegraf, British-licensed newspaper, said today the Soviet commander in the Turingian town of Elstal told women who fear rape from Russian soldiers to:

"Always carry a container of ink with you and if you are attacked spread the ink on your attacker's uniform. As each soldier has only one uniform it will be easy to catch the rapist."

39,065 GIs Getting Aid

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—Approximately 39,065 veterans were in school or engaged in on-the-job training in Virginia under the GI bill or the Vocational Rehabilitation Act at the close of 1948, the Veterans Administration announced today. December subsistence payments to these veterans totaled $3,243,685.97.

Delegates from the National and International Council for Christian Leadership, Protestant laymen's organizations, will meet in Washington during the coming week.

Before convention meetings open on Thursday, the international group will hold a three-day retreat at Fellowship House, 2324 Massachusetts ave. nw., the convention headquarters.

Dr. J. Edwin Orr of Oxford, England, Dr. Henry Ness of Seattle, Wash., and Col. Harold A. Tapp of England will speak at an open meeting of the national group at 7:45 p. m. Tuesday at the Church of the Pilgrims, 22d and P sts. nw.

Drive Planned By Lutherans

An intensive evangelistic campaign in Greater Washington will be launched by the Lutheran Commission on Evangelism next week.

Lay workers from Lutheran churches in the area will meet at 4 p. m. Sunday for an instructional meeting at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol st. The Rev. Peter Dexnis, assistant regional director of the commission, will preside.

The Washington area campaign is part of a Nation-wide drive sponsored by Lutheran Church bodies in the National Lutheran Council.

Doctor Compton To Preach Sunday At Cathedral

Dr. Arthur H. Compton, physicist, author, and chancellor of Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., will preach at 11 a. m. Sunday at the Washington Cathedral.

Dr. Compton, who was for four years chairman of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, has been a cochairman of the National Conference of Christians and Jews since 1938, and was United States delegate to the 1946 UNESCO meeting in Paris.

A second 11 a. m. service will be held in the Bethlehem Chapel of the cathedral for members of the Dutch community of Washington. Preaching at the services will be the Rev. H. J. F. Weseldyk, president of the Central Synod of the Netherlands Reformed Church.

Reuther Raps Employment Bottlenecks

Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers (CIO) said last night the maintenance of full employment is in jeopardy because of economic bottlenecks which he blamed on "the steel industry and other like monopolies".

Reuther was addressing more than 600 members and supporters of the Americans for Democratic Action at the first annual Roosevelt Day Dinner held at the Shoreham Hotel.

The Auto Workers' leader praised President Truman's recent proposal to break steel shortages by Government action asserting, "We shall not win a victory for democracy in the present world crisis with either bullets or bottlenecks."

Lists Shortage Bottlenecks

He listed fertilizer, power, copper and aluminum as other basic materials which he said were short because of bottlenecks.

He accused both the "gloom squads of Wall Street and the goon squads of the Kremlin" of predicting and expecting another depression for America, and of "ganging up on the democratic middle."

Reuther accused James D. Zellerbach, vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers, of trying to block land reforms in Italy, where he now heads the European Recovery Plan mission.

He said such a policy will "lead to the same tragic results as have occurred in China."

Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., proposed that the countries of southeast Asia, who recently assembled under the leadership of Prime Minister Nehru of India, form a political and economic development league and invite the United States, England, France and Holland to join them.

These countries would work to establish independent governments in present colonial areas, Roosevelt said, and also pool technical and financial resources to develop stable growth of this area.

Senate Kefauver Speaker

The third speaker, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) eulogized President Roosevelt and said the ADA dinner was a victory celebration for the principles symbolized by President Roosevelt.

He declared that President Truman, in his inaugural address, reaffirmed our devotion to the dignity and worth of the individual. He described such devotion as "the sort of political thinking required to preserve our way of life."

Chairman of the dinner was Francis Biddle, Attorney General under President Roosevelt, who outlined the principles of ADA.

Hoyas, GW Aim for Upsets at Armory

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

TED COLLINS, who owns all of the Boston Yankees and a part of Kate Smith, is now making a pass at Sid Luckman. He wants Luckman as head coach of his football team which will share the tenancy of the Polo Grounds next season in company with the New York Giants. A month ago, Collins maneuvered the escape of his Yankees from Boston, where they were unloved, unwanted and unattractive.

POVICH

To negotiate with Luckman, Collins went through regular channels. He first asked and received the permission of Luckman's contract boss, George Halas of the Chicago Bears, lest he be charged with tampering. Any chicanery that develops after Collins signs Luckman—well, that's what he's hoping for.

The beauty of the laws of libel is that you can call a guy like Luckman a faker, a package thief, a double-dealer, swindler, con man and a counterfeiter. The truth of these charges is at once the perfect defense in court and high tribute to Luckman, because he does all these things with a football, which is one of the reasons he is the most famous T-quarterback the game ever knew.

IF COLLINS isn't attempting to hire Luckman as a playing coach, then he is hopeful at least that Sidney can impart his own genius to whoever the Yankees' quarterbacks may be. During the nine years Luckman quarterbacked the Bears, Halas boasted they had the advantage of a head coach in the lineup. He not only called the plays, but made them work.

Just about six weeks ago when the Bears were hard put in their Western Division title game with the Cardinals and needed a quick touchdown, Halas reasserted his faith in Luckman. For the first 50 minutes, Johnny Lujack, up from Notre Dame, had turned in the finest quarterbacking job of the year, but that fact notwithstanding, the Bears were still trailing. So out came Lujack and in went the veteran Luckman. The fact that Luckman didn't get the Bears a touchdown is beside the point. Halas had demonstrated where his greater faith lay.

With the Bears, Luckman had the most involved quarterbacking job in football. He had to call the proper play from a list of 437 different offensive plays in Halas' catalogue. Luckman called 'em so well the Bears won four league championships in his 10-year span. Of course, his passing helped a bit, too. Like the day he threw seven touchdown passes against the Giants in 1943.

THERE WOULDN'T be a chance for Luckman to be going to Collins' club except for the fact that Halas has Lujack and Bobby Layne ready to move into Sid's spot at Chicago. Lujack, in fact, is so deft that Halas is now predicting he will be as fine a ball-handler as Luckman ever was, but qualifies that by wondering if he will be as smart a play-caller.

Luckman has a job with the Bears for as long as he likes, Halas has made it plain, but on the day he can move into a head coaching job of his own, Halas won't stand in his way. "He deserves to be a head coach somewhere," Halas has said. At the same time, Halas would be nicely out from under a $20,000-a-year-item on his own payroll.

Collins' yen for Luckman is understandable. Breaking freshly into the New York territory, he needs an important figure as coach. Luckman was a New York kid who went to Columbia, made All-American, and was the most illustrious football player in that school's history. His coaching talents were recognized long ago. For the past five years he was hired by Frank Leahy to tutor the Notre Dame quarterbacks in the T-formation. One of 'em, Lujack, apparently is winding up with Luckman's job with the Bears, so well did he coach.

SAMMY BAUGH, for all of his passing prowess, never did rate with Luckman as a T-formation quarterback. Never could he match Luckman's ball-handling. He threw better short passes than Luckman, long passes that were not as accurate. In fact, and despite Baugh's reputation, there is doubt that he was the best quarterback on the Redskins.

That honor belongs to Riley Smith, according to a slew of old Redskins who played with both Smith and Baugh in Ray Flaherty's old single-wing. Jim Barber, the old tackle, valued Smith not only as a play-caller and blocker, but respected him for his authority.

"If a play didn't go after Smith called it, he never even looked to the bench for a substitute. In the next huddle, he'd tell me, or Turk Edwards, or Willie Wilkin, 'you missed that block. Get out of here and tell coach to send me another tackle.' And there'd be no arguing with him."

Kid Gavilan Outpoints Williams in Nontitle Go

In the most fiercely contested fight seen in the big arena in years, Gavilan snapped the champ's 20-fight winning streak on the votes of the two judges after Referee Ruby Goldstein called it a draw.

Judges Harold Barnes and Artie Schwartz had it for Gavilan 5-4 with one even. Referee Goldstain saw it 4-4 with 2 even and 8 points for each. The AP card found for Gavilan 5-3 with 2 even.

Wants Sugar Ray

On the strength of the exciting uphill triumph, Gavilian's manager, Angel Lopez, said he will post a forfeit with the New York State Athletic Commission next week, demanding that Welter Champ Ray Robinson meet the "Cuban Keed" for the crown.

Blood dropped from cuts over the right eyes of both scrappers in the furious scrap that was fought head to head and shoulder to shoulder from the opening bell. There were no knockdowns in the savage brawl, but they fought after the gong in the first, sixth and tenth.

The big crowd of 15,125 which paid $57,195, rocked and roared throughout the contest. First Williams, deadpan sharp shooter, would appear to have the Kid on the way. Then Gavilan would flurry back in wild style to even matters.

In the final 15 seconds, Gavilan shouldered Ike to the ropes and cut loose with a continuous stream of punches that brought the crowd to its feet. That probably won the fight for him as it was touch and go all night.

Gavilan fought out of a crouch, as he did against Ray Robinson at the Yankee Stadium last summer. That appeared to have the effect of smothering Williams' sharp, short punches.

Both Bleed Freely

On the inside Williams had all the best of it but when they moved off at long range, the flashy Cuban, leaping in with a stream of left hooks and throwing his bolo right, caught the fancy of the mob.

It was almost as close as the first time they met last February when Williams took a unanimous decision. That night he closed Gavilan's left eye completely. It looked for a time as though he would do it again for he raised a lump over that same eye as early as the second. But his marksmanship was off after that.

Gavilan's stabs raised a welt over Williams' right eye in the eighth and a left hook started the blood streaming down the side of his face. The Kid had been bleeding from the nose and mouth since the early rounds.

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Basketball-blase Washingtonians are taking more than fleeting interest in the big collegiate double-header at the Armory tonight and add indictations point to a capacity house.

It's a bargain bill in every sense with the top-ranking visiting fives, Villanova and North Carolina State, providing most of the box-office pull.

In the first game, at 8 p. m. Georgetown takes on unbeaten Villanova, whose 11-game victory streak has catapulted it to the No. 8 spot in the AP national poll.

The Southern Conference nightcap pits George Washington against classy North Carolina State. Despite seven losses, Coach Everett Case's Wolfpack still is ranked fifteenth nationally. Six of State's setbacks have been suffered on the road against top clubs around the country and its average margin of defeat has been only 4 points.

All Box Seats Sold

Yesterday the schools announced a sellout of all box seats. Grandstand seats, priced at $1.50, still may be purchased but these, too, are going at a rapid rate. With students at both local schools enjoying a mid-term vacation, the public does have more of a chance of purchasing tickets.

N. C. State's veteran squad last year won 29 and lost only 3. Only two men from it won't be on hand tonight—Captain Leo Katkaveck, now with the Caps, anad Guard Ed Bartels, who was dropped for disciplinary reasons on a West Coast trip.

The Wolfpack, dominated by mid-Westerners and more familiarly known as the "Hoosier Hot-

Where Tickets Can Be Bought

Tickets for tonight's attractive collegiate double-header at the Armory in which Georgetown meets unbeaten Villanova and George Washington plays classy North Carolina State may be purchased at either of the local schools or at Fairway Sports Store, 1328 G st. nw.

A limited number of seats will be held for game-time (8 o'clock) sale at the Armory.

Giants Sign 2 Negroes for Farm Team

New York, Jan. 28 (AP). The New York Giants today became the fifth major league club to hire Negroes when they purchased Outfielder Monte Irvin and Pitcher Ford Smith from the Negro National League.

Their contracts were immediately turned over to the Jersey City Giants, an International League farm club. Irvin and Smith will report to the Little Giants' training camp at Sanford, Fla., next March 10.

Irvin a righthanded batter, was purchased from the Newark Eagles and Smith, also righthanded, was obtained from the Philadelphia club. The latter pitched for the Kansas City Monarchs of the Negro American League last year where he won 10 games and lost five.

Irvin was signed by the Brooklyn Dodgers during the winter but was released when it was discovered he was the property of the Eagles. At the time of the signing it was believed he was a free agent.

The Giants' entry into the Negro field came exactly three years and three months after the Dodgers broke the ice by signing Jackie Robinson to a Montreal contract. Robinson advanced to the Dodgers in 1947. Later that year, the Dodgers added Dan Bankhead and Cleveland signed Larry Doby. The St. Louis Browns gave trials to Willard Brown and Henry Thompson. The last two failed to stick.

Last season, Brooklyn added a third Negro, Catcher Roy Campanella and the Indians signed Leroy (Satchel) Paige, famed Negro righthander. Last December the Boston Braves assigned Waldon Williams, an 18-year-old high school star, to one of their farm clubs.

Caps Blow 17-Points, Lose to Celtics, 91-90

Celtics, 91 to 90, in Boston Garden tonight, and it was a crippled castoff picked up as a desperation measure who sent the league leaders down to their eighth defeat in 38 games.

The Capitols, trailing by 91 to 84 with only one minute remaining in the game, came through with three hoops as a result of an impressive press defense. On the third of these baskets John Norlander was fouled, but his free throw attempt to send the game into overtime failed.

That meant the ball game, but it had been all but won long before that by Phil Farbman, playing his first game for the Celtics. Farbman, a former C.C.N.Y. star, was let go by the Philadelphia Warriors last week because of a leg injury. Boston took him on a medical trial, the idea being if he proves himself fit the Celts will purchase his contract.

When he arrived on the floor, the Caps led comfortably by 30 to 13 and the second period was just beginning, but by halftime Farbman's set shooting more than anything else had cut the Washington margin to 47 to 45.

The Celtics took over the lead during the third quarter and entered the final session leading by 66 to 62. Late in the game they still led by 88 to 84, with the Caps coming strong, but at this time Fred Scolari committed his sixth personal foul. It was also judged an intentional one, and a technical was added to these two shots when Coach Red Auerbach protested the decision.

Bob Doll sank all three free throws to put Boston ahead, 91 to 84. Jack Nichols and Leo Katkaveck came through with field goals as the Caps stole the ball with the help of their tight press defense.

Norlander then added another layup to make it 91 to 90, and he was fouled on the play. When his shot missed, the game was all over. It was Farbman who committed the final foul.

Terps Upset Miami, 43-42

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29.—Maryland's basketball team traveled 900 miles, but the trip was well worth it because the Terps finally won.

They knocked off Miami tonight, 43-42, to snap an eight-game losing streak and bring their season's record to 3 victories and 11 defeats.

Miami, 12-point favorites, had won 11 games until the Terps handed them their fifth setback.

Trailing by three points in the second half, the Terps scored eight points in nine minutes while holding Miami scoreless.

This gave the ma 36-31 lead and they held on to the advantage the rest of the way.

N. C. State Wins From Richmond

The Wolfpack was paced by Sam Ranzino, 6-foot 2-inch guard from Gary, Ind., who scored 24 points. The victory was State's sixth consecutive triumph this season in Southern Conference warfare.

Dick Metz' 137, 5 Under, Paces Phoenix Open

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 28 (AP).—Dick Metz, veteran of almost 20 years links competition, grabbed the lead in the $10,000 Phoenix Open today with a 36-hole score of 137.

The popular professional, transplanted from the Midwest and now playing out of Virginia Beach, Va., continued with his subpar shooting. A 68 today, coupled with an opening 69, gave him the total, five under regulation figures.

Dr. Cary Middlecoff, Memphis dentist, pulled a 68 today for a third-place 139.

Still within breathing distance of the leaders were Clayton Haefner, Charlotte, N. C.; Skip Alexander, Southern Pines, N. C.; Marty Furgol, Albuquerque, N. Mex.; Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif.; John Palmer, Badin, N. C., and the tournament favorite, Ben Hogan, Hershey, Pa. They all finished with 36-hole total of 140.

Case Joins Cry Against Refs

Richmond, Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—Coach Everett Case of North Carolina State today joined the swelling chorus of cries against basketball refereeing.

"Basketball's greatest problem nowadays is the officiating," said Case.

"Things have reached such a point that a coach just doesn't know how to coach his squad," he told members of the Richmond Sportsman's Club at a luncheon.

"You teach boys all the fine arts of the sport and then the referees blow their whistles for the slightest little tap one player gives another. The only thing I know to do is to figure out ahead of time how the refs are going to call 'em."

Case, whose "Hoosier Hotshots" recently experienced a rather disasterous cross-country tour, cited one instance of an official reversing himself. It happened in a game with Loyola of Los Angeles.

"We were behind by one point with time running out when a technical foul was called against Loyola. Just as one of our men stepped to the free throw line, the official stepped up and told our captain he'd 'acted too hastily.' We never got to shoot and lost by two points."

Priory Booters Win, 2-1

Priory's varsity soccer team yesterday defeated Landon, 2-1, at Landon. Chris May scored both of Priory's goals.

Neely Cool To Vandy Post

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 28 (AP).—Jess Neely, Rice Institute football coach, indicated today there is only a slim chance he might accept the post of head coach at Vanderbilt.

Neely, after a conference with a Vanderbilt committee seeking a successor to Coach Henry R. (Red) Sanders, said:

"There are some things I like about the situation here, but I don't see much chance of leaving Rice."

Before the conference, Neely had said, "I'm happy where I am. I'm not interested in a change."

Lewis had no comment after the conference with Neely, but sources close to the Vanderbilt athletic board said "the job's Neely's if he'll take it."

Bo Rowland, head coach of GW, yesterday talked "informally" with Vanderbilt officials. Rowland, former Vandy player, has many alumni boosters.

Ace Admiral Anita Choice

Arcadia, Calif., Jan. 29 (AP).—Maine Chance Farm's crack chestnut charger, Ace Admiral, is top favorite to capture the $100,000 Santa Anita Maturity tomorrow.

But 11 other contenders were named today to contest the issue over a mile and one quarter route, and a bitter battle is in the offing in the second renewal of Santa Anita's deluxe attraction reserved exclusively for the four-year-olds.

The roll of entries goes like this: Quarter Pole, Vulcan's Forge, Solidarity, Oration, Dinner Gong, Manyunk, Mawe-Up Man, Mas-Miget, Rose Beam, Lurline B., and Danada Gift, along with Ace Admiral.

Clear weather and a drying track which promises to be fast are in the offing, and upwards of 50,000 horse overs and players are due to attend the festivities.

Ace Admiral, winner of $82,325 in purses and eight races in 30 starts during his brief career, goes as an entry with Mrs. Nat Goldstone's Solidarity.

Looks Like Philly Again

Moving Army-Navy Game Is Just Too Costly

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

THEY'RE TALKING about transferring the Army-Navy football game from Philadelphia, but it's much easier to talk about it than to do it.

Shifting the service classic to another site is a complex and involved piece of business, so much so that it probably won't happen.

Army, host to the 1949 game, prefers Philadelphia again and Philadelphia, of course, is "keen" to have the game again. So it's practically certain that Philadelphia it will be.

Even so, athletic officials of the two academies admitted yesterday they were "evaluating information" in regards to a possible shift within the next three years.

If it were moved from Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium, it would have to be played either in Chicago's Soldier Field, the Coliseum in Los Angeles or possibly the Sugar Bowl Stadium in New Orleans. These are the only three stadia in the country large enough to handle the blue ribbon gridiron tussle.

All except the Sugar Bowl can accommodate 100,000 people, first requirement in any proposed shift. The Sugar Bowl can handle 85,000.

But the cost of a change of venue is staggering. The athletic associations of the academies use the $200,000 they net from the Philadelphia game to pay the expenses of all sports at the academies.

One of these items is the transportation of approximately 6000 cadets from West Point and midshipmen from Annapolis to the annual Army-Navy game. That's a must. If the middies and cadets don't go, neither will the football teams.

Fare to Philadelphia from either point is small, but to Chicago academy officials estimate 000, to Los Angeles $1,500,000 and to New Orleans $750,000. If the game were switched to the West Coast, tickets would have to sell for $125 to pay for transportation of cadets alone.

Then, too, officials must consider the time the future admirals and generals would spent away from their books. That alone would seem to kill any hopes of a West Coast game.

And what's an Army-Navy game without the parade of the cadets and midshipmen?

Twenty-eight of the 48 Army-Navy games have been played in Philadelphia. Since 1936, all except three have been held in the Philadelphia stadium.

The latest rumpus about a possible shift in the game was stirred up when Army released its 1949 football schedule. The site of the Navy game was noted as "pending."

"That was simply because the city of Philadelphia hasn't signed a contract for the 1949 game," Col. O. C. Kreuger, graduate manager of athletics at West Point, explained last night.

"We have had no specific requests to play the game elsewhere," he added, "and I feel practically certain that we'll be back in Philadelphia. We have talked about transferring the game elsewhere, but we're merely compiling figures to use as a yardstick to find out how much the shift would cost."

Thomas Buckley, public works director for Philadelphia, said his city "was keen to have the game again and I'm sure we will."

Capt. Howard Caldwell, Navy's new athletic director, said he and Army officials had been "evaluating information in regards to a switch of sites, but that's all."

Hyattsville, Bladensburg Win in County League Contests

With Years Ahead

Colonel Matt's Goal Is His 75th Derby

By Red Smith
Copyright, 1949, N. Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—The man said, "I don't know whether you'd be interested, but you can depend on this. Col. Matt Winn is hanging up his julep mug. He has definitely decided to retire after this year's Derby."

Well, interested, for goodness sake! There hasn't been a report of that nature so interesting since the day Davey Windsor stood up and told a microphone: "I have found it impossible to carry the heavy burden of my responsibilities and to discharge my duties as King as I would wish to do without the help and support of the woman I love."

As a matter of fact, a purely personal handicapping chart makes the colonel's abdication a solid choice over Davey's because there were lots of kings scattered around and about when Windsor chucked in his cards, whereas there is only one Kentucky Derby and there is only one Matt Winn.

It is difficult to imagine being at Churchill Downs on the first Saturday of May and not seeing that pink and smiling Buddha enthroned in his tall pagoda in the infield. Yet the May Saturday must come when the horses will run without Colonel Winn's official benediction.

A year ago Colonel Winn was entertaining at lunch in his suite in the Waldorf Tower. We should all enjoy the health and youth and vigor which he radiated that day. He was telling about how, the summer before, he'd been mildly ill for the first time in his 86 years and how the doctor who looked him over had assured him he could canter past the century mark under a hand ride.

HE LIKED THE NOTION OF running the Derby at the age of 100. You could see that. You could see him looking ahead and planning at a time of life when most men look only backward.

This winter he has shortened his sights. The goal that is always in his eyes now is his diamond jubilee Derby of May 7, 1949, the crowning achievement of the colonel's life, Kentucky's seventy-fifth derby and Colonel Winn's seventy-fifth.

The fact that he has, lately, declined to talk or even let himself think of activities beyond that date would not necessarily mean that the man's information was correct and the colonel had decided to call it a career.

It could mean only that he is so intent upon making this day the greatest occasion and the greatest race and the greatest show in the history of the American turf that he refuses to consider anything else until the immediate job is done.

Still, it would mean the other thing, too. If the old boy is feelin a mite tired, then his diamond jubilee at Churchill would be an appropriate time for him to settle back and start resting. He could step out content in the knowledge that he had established a record that would stand a good deal longer than Equipoise's time for a mile.

Bethesda Course Opens 2d Nine

Bethesda Country Club becomes an 18-hole course May 1 with the official opening of the second nine, greens for which were laid last November.

The mellow winter Washington has been enjoying has been kind to the new turf and Bethesda Pro Harry Griesmer yesterday reported that the new greens were already green and almost in shape for playing.

Along with the expansion in golfing facilities the club will make available a few additional golf and social memberships to select applicants.

Winiarski Leads In Duckpin Victory

Kaz Winiarski's 245-pin game and 617 set was high for game and tied Ed Wittbrodt for high set last night as Winarski's District Motors team defeated Mobil Service, 2-1, in Greater Washington Major Ten-Pin League competition at the Bethesda Bowling Alleys.

Wittbrodt's Soper Esso bowlers downed Cameo Appliance, 2-1, Morrell E-Z Cuts piled up the high team total of 2777 as it blanked Irving St. Restaurant, 3-0. Other results: MATS defeated Friend's Book Shop, 2-1; Air Weather Service defeated Army Engineers, 2-1; Captain Tom's defeated NCS Thunderbolts, 3-0; Eagles defeated Al Miller's Steak House, 3-0.

W-L Tops Mt. Vernon

Mount Vernon High kept Washington-Lee from scoring for 11½ minutes last night when Bill Harding and John Watson froze the ball for a period and a half but in the end succumbed, 30-15, in a Northern Virginia League game at Arlington. Jim Utterback and Hook Zimmerman, each with 10 points, led the winners to their third league victory in four starts.

St. John's JVs Win

St. John's Jay Vees yesterday defeated Georgetown Prep, 68-54, on the losers' court. Bob Reese and Joe Waters shared top scoring honors for St. John's with 14 points each in its seventh win in eight starts.

Hornets Stop Greenbelt; Stay in First

Bladensburg went scoreless in the second period but hit the nets often enough in the other periods to defeat Maryland Park, 23-17, in the first game of a Prince Georges County League Class A double-header last night at College Park.

In the nightcap, Hyattsville turned back a stubborn Greenbelt foe, 34-25. It was the third straight league victory for the Hornets and enabled them to take undisputed possession of first place.

The loss knocked Maryland Park out of a first place tie with Hyattsville. Both teams in the tonight's opener now have two-and-one records in league competition.

Bob Hampton scored seven points to lead Maryland Park and Hawk Foreman's six points were high for the winners. Uncertain passing and floor play by both teams kept the scoring down.

14 D. C. Trackmen Compete In Millrose Games Tonight

New York, Jan. 28.—Washington, D. C., is represented by 14 of its best trackmen in tomorrow night's forty-second annual Millrose Games, which otherwise features a number of foreign runners who scored in last summer's Olympics.

Hurdler Billy Mitchell and two relay teams will wear Georgetown colors. Maryland will be represented by a mile relay quartet. And Bill Mathis, the former Cardozo High sprinter who later starred at Illinois, is entered as unattached in the 60-yard dash.

Georgetown's mile relay team is conceded the best chance of winning, but it will have to beat the 3:27.5 time it chalked up in winning the Philadelphia Inquirer race last week.

The Hoya team of Vince Cino, Mort Kane, Bob Spearman and Ed Sause is paired off with Seton Hall and New York U. Seton Hall has been clocked in 3:22.1 in trials this year.

Maryland's mile relay contingent of Paul Ostrye, Mario Salvanelli, George McGown and Ed Matthews won the Southern Conference special at the Star games two weeks ago in 3:29, but that will probably not be fast enough to win tomorrow. The Terps are pitted against Fordham, Holy Cross and Boston College.

Dick Saunders, Pat O'Brien, Dave Smith and Joe Deady, who finished second for Georgetown in the Boston AAU Games last Saturday, will try to upset the dope against its conqueror, Manhattan, in the 2-mile relay.

Laurel Wins, 41-33

Laurel High, helped by Center Ken Clark's high-point total of 14, defeated Surrattsville, 41-33, last night in Prince Georges County Class C League game at Laurel. The Laurel girls earlier had won their game with Surrattsville, 28-9. Gloria Suader was high scorer with 11 points.

Dental Technique Values Told Clinic

Contributions of dental techniques to other professions as well as dentistry were emphasized here yesterday at the fourth annual Mid-Winter Clinic at Howard University.

Dr. Moses W. Young, professor of anatomy at Howard University College of Medicine, one of the clinic speakers, described and demonstrated how dental techniques are now being used to reproduce the inner ear for classroom studies in anatomy.

Another speaker, Kwan B. Park, D.D.S. discussed the contributions of dental impregnation techniques to the new methods of preserving and mounting anatomical specimen blocks. Park is instructor in operative dentistry at the university's College of Dentistry.

Last night, in annual banquet, Dr. Russell Dixon, dean of Howard's College of Dentistry, was honor guest in recognition of his work in furthering dental standards. He serves as president of both the National Dental Association and the Pan American Odontological Association.

Some 300 dentists are expected to register for clinic proceedings before end of the two-day conference tonight. The clinic is sponsored jointly by the College of Dentistry of Howard University and the Robert T. Freeman Dental Society.

Dimes Drive Is Extended For One Week

The March of Dimes campaign will be extended for one week, ending next Saturday instead of today, Edgar Morris, general chairman, announced last night.

The drive was extended because infantile paralysis cases increased to 135 here this year, compared to only 23 in 1947; because the District chapter spent $18,694 more last year than was collected, and because many Washingtonians were so busy with inauguration activities last week they had no chance to contribute, Morris said.

Forty-eight children in the polio ward of Children's Hospital yesterday enjoyed the annual party given there by the Potomac Electric Power Co. on the annual birthday of the WTOP radio show "Home Service Daily," with entertainment presented by Bert Foy, Mrs. Octa Winter, Carl Brockway, Gillie Coates, Betty Cusick Johnny Salb, Dick Mansfield, Elinor Lee and Bill Jenkins.

However, Judge Gray ruled this is not censorship.

Paradoxically, Washington newspapers carrying James' confession were sold on Baltimore streets while the broadcasts were being made. In the belief that they were conforming with the Baltimore law, some of the stations broadcast the Washington newspaper accounts. But the court ruled that was a breach of the law.

Convicted of contempt of court were stations WFBR, WCBM and WITH and James P. Connolly, news editor of WITH. WFBR and WCBM were fined $300 each and WITH was fined $500. Connolly was fined $100.

Station WSID, in suburban Essex, Md., was absolved. Judge Gray said the statements it broadcast were prejudicial and that it was liable to punishment even though it is situated outside the Baltimore court's jurisdiction. He ruled, however, that there was no direct evidence that anyone in Baltimore had heard its newscasts.

Baltimore Station WBAL, also cited, separated itself from the case and will be tried on February 28.

Attorneys for WCBM said they would appeal the ruling Saturday to the Maryland Court of Appeals. The other stations said they did not know what action they would take.

However, an appeal to Maryland's highest court and, if necessary, to the United States Supreme Court by all the stations has been expected, Judge Gray said he took "considerable comfort" from the fact that in Maryland contempt convictions may be appealed.

Judge Gray said the case involved "two cherished policies of our civilization—freedom of the press and the right to a fair trial."

"The solution," he said, "lies in the fact that neither of these rights is absolute. Each is relative. Each must yield."

He said he is convinced the courts have the right to punish by contempt "where free speech and free press have operated to create a clear and present danger to the administration of justice."

"If we concede," he continued, "that the court has the inherent power, the court is driven irresistibly to the conclusion that it can implement that power by passage of rules that do not transcend the power itself."

The broadcast by Connolly related the Police Commissioner's statement that James had confessed to the Marsha Brill murder, told how he led officers to the knife, connected him with the Carol Bardwell slaying nine days earlier in Washington, connected him with a pending rape case in Baltimore, and referred to his past criminal record.

The other convicted stations used reports that James had confessed and that he was a former convict.

The statements about the confessions, Judge Gray said, constituted "not merely a clear and present danger to the administration of justice, but an actual obstruction in that it deprived James of his constitutional right to an impartial jury trial."

"The court," he continued, "can't help but feel that the broadcasts had an idelible effect on the public mind and that effect would be bound to follow the members of the jury panel into the jury room."

Musicians' Union Presents Commendable Free Concert

By Paul Hume

Washington members of the Musicians' Union presented another in their continuing series of free concerts last night at Roosevelt High School Auditorium.

There, under the direction of Dr. Henry Goldstein, musicians drawn principally from the National Symphony and National Gallery Orchestras played a commendable program. Edwin Davis, Washington pianist of unusual gifts, was soloist in the Schumann concerto.

Dr. Goldstein, who doubles in professions, drills cavities by day and orchestral players in his spare time. He shows plenty of command over an orchestra, and produces results which do him credit.

Davis has a technical facility in his pianism that belittles tricky passages. He tossed off the last movement of the Schumann concerto in a style no less than bravura. Earlier moments, such as the famous duet with the orchestra, showed a more intimate side of his work. If his tone would become somehow gentler or more relaxed, he would be a highly satisfying artist to hear frequently.

Goldstein included two movements of the Tschaikowsky Fifth Symphony. It was interesting to note how the hall's acoustics magnified the tone of the medium-sized orchestra in this music.

Appropriate attention was given the more symphonic passages from Richard Rodgers' score for "Carousel" in a way that pleased the large audience. The concert was paid for out of the union's record and transcription royalty fund.

Veney, who lives at 5308 East Capitol st., has held the training school job in Washington since 1944. Before that he was supervising probation officer of the Juvenile Court in Washington.

Special Report Given on Va. School Needs

Richmond, Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—The State Board of Education met here today and heard a special supplemental report on a recent Statewide survey of school construction needs.

The survey, made some time ago, was a compilation of estimates obtained from school authorities in the various localities. These estimates placed the State's school construction needs at about 396 million dollars over a 10-year period.

G. Tyler Miller, State superintendent of public instruction, said after today's meeting that the special report presented the board was made on the basis of Statewide school construction needs compared with current building costs on a unit basis.

Miller, who will leave this weekend for a vacation, said the exact figures reached will not be available for several weeks until after a study is made of other phases of the report.

Miller said as of January 25 commitments already made from the literary fund for school construction left an incumbrance deficit of $246,032. He added it probably will be the latter part of 1949 before this deficit is cleared up.

A request from Madison College at Harrisonburg to increase tuition, board, room and laundry fees was granted, raising these from $445 to $500 for the 1949-50 school term.

Other board action today included:

Approval of erection of a temporary building at Disputanta Training School for Negroes in Prince Georges County. The Quonset construction building was approved because of badly overcrowded conditions. The building is not to be used beyond five years without the board's approval.

Approval of a textbook committee resolution saying that adopted textbooks on Virginia history may be used in any or all grades, four to seven, inclusive, of the elementary school. Heretofore, this has been limited to the fifth grade.

Md. CIO Group to Seek More Pay for Jobless

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 28 (AP).—Spokesman John Estes said today Cumberland CIO Textile Workers have called for an overhaul of State unemployment compensation laws.

Estes, representing Cumberland Local 1874 of the Textile Workers of America and chairman of the Western Maryland Labor Unity Conference, said he would back a bill introduced in the House this week. The bill would amend generally the State jobless pay laws and increase the maximum weekly benefit from $25 to $30.

Woman Gets Jail Sentence, Collapses

The hysterical woman was Miss Eileen June Ader, no permanent address.

In November, 1947, she was placed on probation on the check-passing charge, but subsequently was convicted in New York of a similar charge.

Deputy marshals carried her from the courtroom to the lockup after she collapsed on hearing the sentence.

Others sentenced in District Court yesterday included Robert Bennett, 37, 740 7th st. se., found guilty of second-degree murder and sentenced to serve 5 to 20 years prison. Bennett was convicted of the fatal cutting of John Alexander, 37, of the same address.

Loraine Aronstein, 40, of 1230 7th st. nw., pleaded guilty to grand larceny and received two to six years for theft of more than $100 in clothing from an apartment.

Maurice Williams, 47, of 1918 New Hampshire ave. nw., received two to six months in jail on a charge of possession of numbers slips. Given probation on numbers lottery charges were Flora Beaner, 32, 1516 7th st. nw., and Jency Garrett, 41, of 611 Aker st. ne.

For numbers lottery convictions, Otis Jones, 28, of 411 E st. ne.; William A. Brown, 30, of 52 L st. nw., and Beatrice Campbell, 39, of 1633 4th st. nw., were fined $500 each.

Joseph Mack, 47, 1413 Corcoran st. nw., received three to nine years prison for stealing $2045 in liquors from the basement of Richard H. Jenkins, 3810 Davis pl. nw.

Signal Spurs Hunt for B-29 Near Canaries

London, Jan. 28 (AP).—Spurred by a radio signal, air rescue units searching for a missing American B-29 Superfortress centered their efforts tonight on an area of the Atlantic 150 miles northeast of the Canary Islands.

The signal, in the form of a constant Morse code "T," raised hopes the 15 men aboard the lost B-29 had been able to take to life rafts.

Those aboard the B-29:

Northern Va. Hospital Unit Advocated At Meeting

Creation of Mental, Communicable Disease Facility Group's Main Aim

Lay and professional health officials of Arlington and surrounding communities, meeting at the Arlington Chamber of Commerce, last night adopted a resolution recommending creation of a hospital commission for northern Virginia.

The prime objective of such a commission would be creation of a mental and communicable disease facility to serve the needs of the northern Virginia area.

A score of persons representing Alexandria, Falls Church, Arlington, Fairfax, Prince William and Fauquier Counties attended the meeting, sponsored by the public health committee of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce.

Creation of the hospital commission under authority of Chapter 344, Acts of the 1946 Virginia General Assembly, was proposed by State Senator Charles R. Fenwick, chairman of the Arlington chamber's public health committee.

The proposal was adopted unanimously.

D. C. Could Refuse Cases

Pointing to the present lack of facilities, Dr. Ralph G. Beachley, Arlington County director of public health and welfare, deplored the present difficulty in hospitalizing mental and communicable disease cases, and warned it is possible District of Columbia may some day refuse to hospitalize Virginia infantile paralysis cases. Such cases are the only contagious cases now accepted from Virginia in Washington, he said.

"There are many Government workers rooming in Arlington, and if these persons come down with a contagious disease the landlords are not prepared to cope with such cases," the Arlington official declared. "They call the health department and say they think such a person should be in a hospital. We think so too, but we have to leave them in the landlord's home."

Dr. Joseph W. Still, public health officer of the Fauquier and Prince William Counties, said that if a case of spinal meningitis developed in his counties, he probably would have to leave the patient quarantined at home for lack of a hospital.

Admission of Child Refused

Fenwick read a letter from an Arlington mother whose child a year ago had suddenly come down with meningitis. Though an emergency case, the child was refused admittance to Washington hospitals he said.

As an emergency measure, following a board meeting, the Arlington Hospital, which ordinarily does not take communicable disease cases, took the case but the child died, he declared.

He said the child's mother did not know if the delay in getting the child admitted had anything to do with its death, but that the incident pointed to the need for a communicable disease facility in the area.

"There is no such facility this side of Charlottesville," he declared.

David C. Book, business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, said Alexandrians had long felt the need for facilities for care of tuberculosis cases especially.

The recommendation for creation of an area hospital commission will be carried back to the governing bodies of the various communities represented at last night's meeting. These governing bodies must pass resolutions creating such a commission and appoint representatives to such joint body if it is set up.

While Loudoun County was not represented at last night's meeting, others present said it probably would join in the plan for an area hospital commission.

Half of Falls Church Without Water 4 Hours

Approximately half the city of Falls Church was without water for four hours last night when a short circuit knocked out electric pumps in the city's water system. Many were without water from about 5 to 9 p. m., officials said.

Harper Blasts Federation on Tax Tabling

The Federation of Civic Associations last night referred the sales tax to its executive committee after its president, Ernest F. Harper, castigated the body for failing to take direct action. The meeting was held in the board room of the District Building.

Harper, following the tabling of a motion to oppose the tax, declared such tactics "accomplish nothing" and exhibited "a sign of weakness." The motion to refer to the executive committee followed.

School History Traced

Robert N. Mattingly, principal of Cardozo High School, traced the history of the present school and a new school and athletic field on a ne wschool and athletic field on ground located west of Georgia ave. and south of Barry pl. nw.

The federation requested inclusion in the District budget of $56,000 to provide fluorine treatment for all school children. Similar action was taken at the last meeting of the Federation of Citizens Associations. Reinsertion in the budget also was asked for appropriations to establish two additional dental clinics for children, one in Anacostia and the other in the Northeast section east of Minnesota, ave. ne.

Police Statement Probe

A request for investigation by the Commissioners and the Police Trial Board of alleged statements of Lieut. George Cooper, of the Twelfth Precinct, at a meeting of the North Capitol Citizens Association was voted. The alleged remarks dealt with measures to be taken to insure against infiltration of "undesirables" into the area.

A resolution was approved asking that all future contracts of sale of land to the District Redevelopment Agency contain prohibitions against refusal to sell, lease or rent because of race, creed or color and that certain limitations of rent, cost of improvements and character of maintainence be placed. Also asked was reservation of the right of the former occupants to purchase the property for a limited time.

The Erie Heights Civic Association was accepted for membership in the federation.

Boy Aids Mother

3 in Family Saved From Asphyxiation

A 42-year-old mother, Mrs. Vera D. Lord of 1401 Oglethorpe st. nw., her 3½-year-old son and daughter, 15, were saved from being overcome by coal gas yesterday morning when the boy shook his mother awake.

Mrs. Lord said she was aroused by her son, Charles Ellis Lord, about 10:40 a. m. because he felt sick. Attacked by dizziness, Mrs. Lord said she struggled from her bed, smelling a strong odor of coal gas, staggered into an adjoining room in the first floor apartment and aroused her daughter, Nancy, after shaking her for about five minutes.

Mrs. Lord then went to the telephone and told the operator, who notified police. Fire Department Rescue Squad No. 2 and Engine Company No. 22 responded.

The Rescue Squad treated the family with oxygen and ammonia while the engine company entered a third floor apartment by ladder and began ventilating the building.

The Fire Marshal's office said a vent in a flue was clogged and gas had backed into the building.

Mrs. Lord, whose husband, Columbus D. Lord, is a construction engineer at the Pentagon, said she had smelled coal gas the preceding day but had given it no thought. Lord, who had gone to work, also suffered from headaches as a result, as did Dr. Thomas E. Butler, a dentist, and Mrs. Butler living in the apartment above the Lords.

Board of Trade Asks D. C. Man As Guard Chief

The Washington Board of Trade yesterday asked Defense Secretary James V. Forrestal to appoint a District man as new commanding general of the District National Guard.

Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, the present commanding general, has passed the statutory retirement age and is expected to retire soon.

The board's letter to Forrestal, signed by Leon Chatelain, jr., board president, said the board felt the selection should be made from among "qualified local men who have had experience with the Guard and who are familiar with local conditions."

"While it is true that jurisdiction over the Guard is on a national level rather than on a local level, as it is in the 48 States, it is nevertheless essentially a Washington organization composed of Washington men," Chatelain wrote.

It was learned, meanwhile, that the Army General Staff has recommended consolidation of the local Guard positions of commanding general and adjutant general.

The Army, it was said, wants a line officer to fill the combined posts. An adjutant general has no authority to command troops, but a line officer could legally perform the duties of both positions.

Senior line officer in the District militia now is Col. Leroy S. Mann, commanding officer of the 260th Aircraft Coast Artillery. He has strong backing for appointment to the top post.

However, sources close to the situation were reported yesterday to believe the Army leans toward the appointment of Col. William H. Abendroth, a resident member of the General Staff committee on National Guard policy.

Strangled Baby's Body Found in Trash Receptacle

Strangled by a piece of cloth tied around its neck, the body of a baby boy was found in a trash receptacle at Colorado ave. and Kennedy st. nw. at 8 a. m. yesterday by Sanitation Department workers.

The body was wrapped in newspapers. Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy coroner, said at the Morgue the child had been strangled after living several hours. Homicide Squad detectives were assigned to investigate.

A baby girl was found similarly strangled a few hours after birth last October 9 in a trash receptacle in the 3100 block of Hiatt pl. nw.

Old Picket Fence 'Music' of Percussion Type Instruments To Feature South American Tunes at Concert Sunday

The generations of youngsters who made "music" by the time-honored means of running a stick along a picket fence are coming into their own at last.

For the picket fence idea incorporated into a bamboo instrument called a reco-reco will play a prominent part in a concert of South American music to be presented in Constitution Hall at 4 p. m. Sunday.

Conducting the National Symphony Orchestra in a program of his own compositions will be the celebrated Brazilian Composer Heitor Villa-Lobos, whose score for the Broadway show "Magdalena" last year brought superlatives from music critics.

Other exotic percussion instruments to be used include some made of turtle shell. The reco-reco, a grooved length of bamboo, is played by running a stick along the grooves.

A short demonstration was given by the 62-year-old composer at a press interview at Constitution Hall yesterday. He picked up three of the queerly shaped instruments and with a few deft movements of his hands, he had his hearers almost hypnotically moving into rhumba steps.

Since "vanilla ice cream" is the only English phrase known by the composer, the conference was carried on through an interpreter, pretty Mrs. Heloisa Monies of Arlington, daughter of a former military attache at the Brazilian Embassy. She is an erstwhile school teacher and has also sung in choral groups.

Mrs. Monies explained that the instruments were of a type used since antiquity by Brazilian Indians and Negroes for their folk music.

Harry Brabec, a percussion man with the symphony, who will play some of the instruments at the concert said they presented no serious problem since he was familiar with the American counterparts of many of them.

Detective Meshkoff Fined $50 And Restored to Active Duty

Precinct Detective John P. Meshkoff, attached to the Tenth Precinct, yesterday was found guilty by a Police Trial Board of being under the influence of alcohol to such an extent that he was unfit for performance of duty while on off-duty status.

Meshkoff

The board fined him $50 and ordered him restored to active duty. He had been suspended since January 16 when the offense occurred.

The trial board charge grew out of an accident at 5 a. m. January 16 when Meshkoff's automobile crashed through a safety gate on Highway Bridge and narrowly missed dropping into the Potomac River through the open draw. No one was injured in the accident.

At the time, Meshkoff was charged with failing to give full time and attention to his driving and forfeited $15 collateral at the Fourth Precinct.

At yesterday's hearing, Lieut. Todd Thoman, in command of the Fourth Precinct at the time of the accident, testified that he found Meshkoff unsteady on his feet, his face flushed and his eyes watery and red. There was a moderate odor of alcohol on his breath, Thoman said.

On the way to the precinct station house, Meshkoff pleaded with him for "a break," stating that he knew he had been drinking but he'd never been in trouble before, Thoman declared.

The police lieutenant said that at the precinct station he informed Corp. Elmer Skinner of the Traffic Division, that he had suspended Meshkoff for being under the influence of alcohol but that he was not going to charge him on the precinct arrest book.

Skinner then said that in order to protect his men, he would have to charge Meshkoff with something, Thoman added. The trial board learned in later testimony that Pvt. Fred Buckler of the Traffic Division, had placed the charge of failing to give full time and attention against Meshkoff at the order of Skinner, who was his superior officer.

Thoman said he could have charged Meshkoff with driving while under the influence of alcohol but that "he didn't care to."

Also declaring that Meshkoff was staggering and appeared drunk was Sergt. William E. Rogers of the Fourth Precinct.

Buckler and another Traffic Division policeman, Pvt. James E. Gilbert, said they noticed a faint odor of alcohol on Meshkoff's breath, but did not think he was intoxicated.

Meshkoff testified that he had been working 18 straight hours before the accident and must have dozed off as he started across the bridge toward his home at 3027 Gunston rd., Alexandria, Va.

He said he had reported for line-up at police headquarters at 8:15 a. m. January 15, had kept in touch with the precinct all day, and at midnight had gone on a five-hour "plant" on his own in the 1700 block of Columbia rd. nw., where there have been a number of recent housebreakings.

While on the "plant", he had eaten three salami sandwiches and had drunk a can of beer, he said.

Members of the Trial Board were Inspector Robert Pearce and Captains John Agnew and Lorraine Johnson.

Health Budget Testimony Set Monday

District health officials are slated to testify Monday before the House Appropriations Subcommittee headed by Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.) on their proposed $10,700,000 budget for the next fiscal year.

Bates said his subcommittee's hearings on the 103-million-dollar city budget plan may be completed next week. A full day of open hearings for citizens groups will be held after city officials finish their budget testimony in executive session. The public hearing date is not yet set.

Bates' group yesterday heard police officials present details of their 6.5-million-dollar proposed budget which would include funds for 30 more policemen and 19 new civilian employes. Fire officials also testified about their department's proposed $3,756,000 budget.

Others who testified included officials of the Juvenile and Municipal Courts, Municipal Court of Appeals, Veterans' Information Center, and some technical agencies in the District Engineer Department.

In the windup of his subcommittee's first week of reviewing the budget, Bates indicated that he agrees with the Commissioners in their view that the budget they submitted is a very "tight" one.

D. C. Court Rules

Wrong Age Gives Spouse No Comeback

The doctrine of "caveat emptor"—legal language for "let the buyer beware"—applies to matrimony, too, according to Judge Matthew F. McGuire.

The jurist ruled yesterday a husband may lack the right to complain to the courts if his wife turns out to be older than she stated on marriage license application. Because of this, Sigmund W. Heinitsh, 48, lost his plea that he be relieved from paying temporary alimony to Mrs. Sara H. Heinitsh, 217 8th st. se.

When the Heinitshes married in 1926, Sara said she was about 23, it was stated in court. When she went before the Domestic Relations Commissioner, last year, she admitted to "over 60." But her lawyer, Richard B. Washington, placed her age as "in her 70s."

Mrs. Heinitsh, a nurse, sued for divorce last June, charging that her spouse deserted her in 1938. He countersued for divorce, claiming more than five years' voluntary separation.

Later, Mrs. Heinitsh was awarded $10 a week alimony pending the outcome of the divorce suits.

Her attorney came into court yesterday for a contempt citation, charging that Heinitsh was $80 in arrears.

He said that because of her age, "more than 70 years," and because of ill health, Mrs. Heinitsh was in need of prompt payment.

Heinitsh's attorney, Joseph D. DiLeo, said his client was a tourist guide, and that the business was known to be slack in the wintertime. Also, he said, Heinitsh was "very nervous."

"And, finally, I am surprised to learn Mrs. Heinitsh's age. I believed it to be considerably less, and I am sure my client—," DiLeo said.

"He married her," said Judge McGuire. "Caveat emptor, let him support her."

"As for the nervousness, Mr. DiLeo, you may be nervous and I may be nervous but we go on working. You tell him to pay and I'll continue this a week. It'll probably make him more nervous, but you tell him anyway," said the judge.

23 Broadmoor Tenants Await Eviction Decision

Twenty-three tenants at the Broadmoor Apartments were yesterday assured possession of their apartments until a decision on the validity of cooperative housing companies is reached by the United States Court of Appeals.

The tenants involved are fighting eviction from the Connecticut ave. apartment house. Judge Tamm of District Court in December ruled against them and said that the cooperative was legal. He said purchasers in the cooperative were landlords and able, with compliance with the District Emergency Rent Control Act, to evict the tenants. An appeal was taken yesterday through the tenants' attorney, Spencer Gordon.

The cooperative owners filed suit for eviction in Municipal Court. Judge Thomas D. Quinn ordered the eviction action stayed pending a decision of the United States Court of Appeals on Judge Tamm's decision.

Md. Girl, 7, Killed by Bus Just After Alighting

Doris Shepherd Of Morningside, Returning From School, Is Victim

A 7-year-old girl was crushed to death under a school bus a moment or two after she alighted from it at 4:10 p. m. yesterday in Morningside, Prince Georges County, Md.

The child was Doris Shepherd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin B. Shepherd, 207 Randolph rd., and a second-grade student at the Suitland elementary school. Prince Georges County School Superintendent William S. Schmidt said no one witnessed the action as far as he could learn.

May Have Turned Back

Schmidt said Doris left the bus with 26 other children, the school safety patrol girl bringing up the rear, and then all crossed in front of the bus before Raymond H. Schultz, the driver, started up. Police said Doris may have dropped some schoolbooks or papers and may have turned back to pick them up only to be crushed under a rear wheel.

Schmidt said that as the bus was picking up momentum in second gear some of the approximately 14 children still inside the bus looked out the back, saw the girl lying in the road and called to Schultz who stopped the vehicle.

Officials pointed out that the hood of the bus is high and the driver would be unable to see a small child in front of it.

Accident Near Home

The child was taken to the office of Dr. Paul C. Van Natta, 5440 Silver Hill rd., Parkland. He said she had already died of a crushed chest, pelvis and collarbone. The point where she was hit is about 700 feet from her home.

After an examination by Dr. James I. Boyd, deputy county medical examiner, the body was taken to Gasch's funeral home, Hyattsville.

Police said the bus driver and the safety patrol girl agreed there appeared to be no children near the bus when it started up. Schultz, a school bus driver more than 10 years, was booked on a charge of manslaughter at the Upper Marlboro police station, pending an inquest. He lives in Clinton, Md.

A physician gave first-aid treatment to his son when the latter, Charles Lally, jr., 16, of 3800 Cathedral ave. nw., was struck as he ran across 38th st. in the 2800 block at 7:45 p. m. by an automobile driven by a friend, Edward Richards, 19, of 1447 Clifton st. nw. Man Takes Coat; Hit By Car, Fined $10

An alleged topcoat snatcher threw the wool coat over the eyes of its owner and a friend as they pursued him out of a restaurant at 1423 P st. nw. at 12:35 a. m. yesterday, then ran smack into an automobile, according to police.

William J. Walker, 607 Kenyon st. nw., and Alfred D. Chambers, 1334 Q st. nw., charged that Walter Schuller, 28, of 1723 U st. nw., seized Walker's topcoat and dashed out of the restaurant.

They said they pursued and were just about to overtake him at 16th and P sts. when he turned and threw the coat into their faces.

They were temporarily blinded but so, apparently, was Schuller for a second later he collided with an automobile driven by Stephen A. Braxton, 38, of 928 19th st. ne.

Police took Schuller to Freedmen's Hospital for treatment for severe cuts of the head and face, and then took him to Thirteenth Precinct station.

There Walker said Schuller had been sufficiently punished and declined to press charges. Police, however, charged him with creating a hazard in crossing the street. Schuller forfeited $10 collateral.

Jail Paper Hits Thieves

District Department of Corrections weekly newspaper hinted yesterday that those trying to correct the misbehavior of its charges need a little correction themselves.

The current issue of the weekly, the Personnel News, edited and prepared by employes at the jail, reformatory and the workhouse, carries this notice:

"We are sorry to report that certain persons have, without giving the matter proper thought as to the seriousness of the act, taken several of the inaugural (auto) tags from the (Lorton Reformatory) plant.

"These should be returned at once to avoid publication of the names in the next issue of Personnel News."

Urges Thinking Habit

Health Department workers were urged yesterday to "keep your feet on the ground and off the desk" and to get the habit of thinking.

In a four-point bulletin on "office decorum," Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, recommended that employes "take time to be courteous," maintain "a calm, collected attitude," keep telephone conversations short and to get into the thinking habit.

On the subject of thinking, the official noted that many business firms have posted signs advising employes to "Think." "This is a good habit to get into. Why not start now?" Dr. Ruhland asked.

In Nearby States

Moonshine Production Shows Gain

Mountain dew has been falling more heavily in nearby States and in the Nation as a whole, an Alcohol Tax Unit report on still seizures and bootlegging arrests showed yesterday.

The Alcohol Tax Unit, a division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, reported that 209 stills were seized during last December in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, a district which also includes the District of Columbia.

The figures compares with 147 stills with 7972 gallons of daily capacity seized in December, 1947, in the area.

The statistics bear out recent statements by revenue officers in Maryland that moonshining is making a strong comeback since the industry's wartime slump. Washington is regarded as one of the best markets for illicit liquor in the Nation.

Greatest illegal distilling operations nearby are said to be in southern Maryland and also near the Pennsylvania border of the State. Recently, arrests have been made for operating stills in areas as near to Washington as Prince Georges County (Md.) and Fairfax County (Va.)

Nationally, seizures of stills increased from 3090 with a daily capacity of 79,693 gallons in the last half of 1947, to 3885 with a 112,831-gallon capacity in the same period last year.

Mrs. Drexel claimed that while under Dr. Groh's care at the hospital in 1946 she fell out of bed after shock treatments. She said she broke an arm and suffered other injuries. She asked $50,000.

The case was tried last year by jury before Judge Jennings Bailey, and a $10,000 verdict in favor of Mrs. Drexel resulted. However, on a motion for new trial, Judge Bailey set the verdict aside on grounds it was against the weight of evidence and for technical reasons.

The resulting new trial was before a jury in Judge T. Alan Goldsborough's court. The defendants were represented by Attorney John R. Daily.

Crisp, Short Hair-Do Is Up and Coming

THE CRISP, short bob is this year's most up and coming hair style. Fashion conscious women are clipping their long locks in anticipation of the Easter hats which have been designed to conform with the line of the new hair styles.

One of the first to advocate the short coiffure was Michel, hair stylist for Helena Rubinstein. In the accompanying photographs he interpretes the Directoire influence in a brief, hair style. Half bangs give a forward movement and the almost straight, graduated cut is brushed and groomed to give the effect of a marcel wave. In back it is clipped short, brushed to the top of the head. Instructors at the local Rubinstein shop have received a course of instruction in hair styling from Michel.

Zoning Rules For Parking Curb Building

Present District zoning requirements for provision of parking spaces with each new apartment, private club, hotel or other residential building erected have hindered such construction, it was reported yesterday.

The Commissioners' Advisory Committee on zoning and parking meeting yesterday in the District Building, said that compliance with these regulations "entails considerable additional expense for the builders" and therefore retards erection of "needed living accommodations."

The statement was incorporated in the draft of a resolution prepared by the committee on how to attack zoning-parking problems.

The committee adopted a plank that the "existing zoning rules "cannot alone accomplish" a major improvement in the parking situation and even "proposed amendments" will not help toward this end.

The group consists of District officials and representatives of the building industry and is headed by Robert O. Clouser, planning director, District Zoning Commission.

Area Builders Start 800 New Units in Dec.

Washington area homebuilders started 800 new permanent dwelling units in December, making a total of 19,080 for 1948, according to preliminary estimates released yesterday by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Labor Department.

In the three full years since the end of the war, nearly 50,000 new homes have been started in the area, covering the District, Alexandria City and Arlington and Fairfax Counties, Virginia, and Montgomery and Prince Georges counties in Maryland. The period saw a marked shift from construction of one-family houses to apartment building.

The one-family house accounted for 77 per cent of all units started in 1946, compared with 57 per cent in 1947 and 45 per cent in 1948. At the same time rental housing (units in two-or-more family structures) increased from 2500 units in 1946 to 8500 in 1947 and 10,600 in 1948.

Area home construction followed the national trend in early 1948, reaching peak in May, then dropped sharply, reaching the lowest monthly level in almost two years in December.

More than four-fifths of all units started in this area last year were in suburban sections outside the District, the BLS reported.

Where Handicraft Classes Are Held

My husband has become interested in woodworking as a hobby. Can you tell us whether evening classes for beginners in the use of woodworking tools and the making of simple pieces of furniture are held anywhere in Washington? D. W. H.

The Adult Education department of the Washington public schools will have a class in woodworking starting on January 31 at both the Bell Annex, located at 7th and O sts. nw., and at McKinley School at 2d and T sts. ne. The class at both schools meets on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday at 6:30 p. m. for three hours each evening. Since the instruction is largely individual, beginners as well as more advanced woodworkers may enroll. Since you write from out of the District, you may be interested in knowing that there will be a nominal nonresident charge as well as the usual laboratory fee for the course. You may register for the class at either of the above-mentioned schools at 6:30 p. m. on January 31.

I have a fairly large Oriental rug (7 by 10 feet) which just will not lie flat, but always has some little folds along one side. A pad will not help since the folds are caused by uneven weaving. I wonder whether there is any method such as stretching or pressing which would improve this condition, and if so, who could do it? R. B.

A rug repair firm which is experienced on Oriental rugs can probably improve your rug a great deal. Briefly, they clip the threads which are causing the tension and replace them. If necessary, they also will put a foundation on the back of the rug to hold it flat. One firm which does this work can be reached by calling Michigan 7900.

We have just moved to a new apartment, and the painters have splashed paint everywhere. Could you tell me how to remove pale gray paint from: blue linoleum, white enamel, black-and-white tiles (walls and floors), wooden kitchen cabinets painted white (I imagine this will be impossible). Also, how to remove cement, tar and other stains from tiled bathroom floor (black-and-white). R. B.

To remove paint from all the surfaces mentioned, scrape away as much as possible with a dull knife or rub a coin over it. When the surface has been broken sponge with carbon tetrachloride, turpentine or benzine. (Benzine is inflammable, so use it with care). Allow the solvent time to soak into the paint and then rub away with a coarse cloth. The soaking and rubbing routine may need to be repeated several times to completely remove the paint.

Moisten the cement-spattered tile with a solution of one part muriatic (hydrochloric) acid in 20 parts of water. Allow to remain on the tile a few minutes then remove all of it by thoroughly rinsing with clear water. This should soften the cement so it can be easily scraped away. Muriatic acid has a corrosive effect, so be sure to wear old clothes during the process.

The tar and other stains should readily disappear by scrubbing the floor with a stiff brush and soap and water to which household bleach has been added.

I have a large piece of mink fur which I wish to use in making a hat and muff. The fur has been stored for a number of years and looks a little "ratty." Is there any way to restore the gloss to the fur that I can do at home? B. L. S.

Brush and comb the fur well and then lay it out on a flat surface and stroke the fur lightly in the direction the hair grows with a damp sponge or soft cloth. Be sure no water penetrates the skin. Now, cover the dampened fur with tissue paper and run a hot iron over the paper. Lift paper and run iron over the fur quickly. Use almost no pressure and be sure the iron is not hot enough to burn the fur. Always run the iron with the flow of the fur. If you are completely inexperienced in this sort of work, try the entire process on a small piece you do not need to use before doing it on the larger piece.

Inquiries and contributions to the "Ask Anne" column must be in written form. We regret that time does not permit handling them by telephone. Address letters or cards to Anne, Room 403, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

Hot Soup to Start Off a Meal Gives a Warm, Filling Feeling

All that stands between you and a svelte figure is appetite. Right? Then how about some appetizers . . . there are ways to feel satisfied on fewer calories.

Science finds that a feeling of warmth is part of the normal satisfaction of hunger. It's comforting. So a low-calorie meal that contains something hot brings a greater degree of satisfaction. A hot liquid at the beginning of a meal, such as bouillon or hot soup made with skim milk, is soothing comfort for comparatively few calories.

The signal to stop eating flashes to the mind when a certain tension is exerted on the muscle fibers of the stomach. So it's good reducing strategy to include in each meal a bulky food which fills the spaces and exerts tension, without furnishing too many calories. If the food requires considerable chewing, so much the better, for the very act of chewing is part of hunger satisfaction. Cole slaw, raw carrot slivers, an apple and celery salad or crisp, crunchy crackers fill the bill.

For lasting satiety, however, each meal must contain something that sticks to the ribs. Fats and proteins do this. But fats are taboo because of their high calorie count. Protein foods—meat, fish, eggs or cheese—are perfect, for they pack a wallop. Protein not only sticks to the ribs, but speeds up the metabolism to burn calories at a faster clip. Note that every meal in the Scientific Wonder Diet is built around a complete protein food.

A meal is relished more when eaten slowly. Fast eaters put the emphasis on quantity, not on flavor. Also, it's a mistake to grab something out of the ice box for lunch, and stand up to eat it—it doesn't seem like a meal at all.

String Them for the Baby

A strong piece of cord-fishing line is excellent and odds and ends found in every household are convenient for the "makings" of most satisfying babies' playthings.

Empty spools can be strung. Left unpainted or decorated with nonpoisonous paint, they fit the baby's grip well and have a good substantial feeling that he will enjoy. They can be boiled, too, if they begin to get dirty.

Large coat-size buttons are also the raw stuff of which a jingly hand-filling toy can be made. Smaller buttons may be used but aren't as satisfactory, since they are harder for the inexperienced hand to hold. There's always the outside chance, too, that one will be swallowed should the string break or become untied.

The little Christmas bells used on trees or as part of a holiday coat lapel will make a fine toy. One should be sure that these are made substantially enough so that they won't come apart or have sharp edges that might cut the baby's mouth.

You can be sure that every infant will put such things in his mouth, so make certain that no damage can result from sharp edges, harmful paint or loose pieces.

Double Duty Suit Is Featured

A suit with two skirts, a long-requested wardrobe item by the business girl, is featured in the February issue of Charm, the magazine for the business girl. To a sculptured jacket of soft pink wool, the 9-to-5 girl can add a slim navy skirt with a deep pleat at the back, or a matching pink skirt that ends in a swirl of a flare. Either way, it's a perfect desk-to-date ensemble.

Breathing Can Be Beautiful

ARTFULLY EMPLOYED, the effects of perfume may be as endearing as a blush, as winning as a handshake, according to an article in the February issue of Charm, the Magazine for the Business Girl.

Perfume should project your personality. Choose it as carefully as you would a dress or a color, Charm suggests. Since you cannot judge by the bottle or by the price or by a passing whiff, try it on. Flick a few drops onto your wrist, give it a chance to combine with the chemistry of your skin, then choose your perfume.

In the morning, touch a few drops about your face, and to the crooks of your elbow. Scent a small piece of ribbon and tie it to the strap of your slip. During the day, carry a safely bottled supply in your purse for retouching.

Paint shelves and bureau drawers with a perfumed lacquer, attach sachets to your dress hangers, keep empty flacons of perfume in the drawers that hold your lingerie, gloves, or stationery. Identify yourself with a special scent that seems most rightfully yours.

Softening Cream Aid to Skin

Washing softens the skin pleasantly, but it also takes away the skin's surface oils. Softening lotion or cream must substitute for that oil. Whether your skin is naturally dry or oily, it needs a protective film to guard against the weather and to maintain its young, satiny texture. Smooth on lotion or cream each time you wash your face and hands. And remember your skin is alive, growing, changing every day. Keep it healthy from the inside, too, with a sensible diet, and lots of sleep and exercise.

February Fashion Hint

Give an April outlook to a February frock with a fresh collar. To last season's close-throated dark dress, add a ruffled, close little collar which you can make up yourself from fancy-edged picot ribbon, 1¾ inches wide. Gather the ribbon to fit around your throat.

Patriotic Women's Parley Hears U. S. Policies Attacked

By Genevieve Reynolds

Representative Ralph W. Gwinn of New York declared yesterday that the American variety of socialism involves the same principles as Italian fascism, German nazism and Russian communism.

"American people deceive themselves in thinking our own new deal or welfare state, our own socialism, just because it is our own, is different from socialism in the rest of the world," he told some 500 delegates to the twenty-third Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, now in session at the Statler Hotel. Participating in the three-day conclave are 35 national women's patriotic groups.

The New York Representative asserted that the underlying issue of our time is whether we have the will to smash state socialism in Amerca and restore a free economy as "the only source of food and houses." "Many want to drive Socialists and Communists out of this country, not knowing they have been embracing, even clamoring for their ideas and teachings," he said.

557,000 Citizen Tenants

The speaker charged that American socialism already is the "landlord of 557,000 families. Counting four to the family, he pointed out, means that over 2,300,000 "are beholden to Washington for living space." They must vote in appreciation of what the Socalist regime does for them or give up their apartments MVD American plan.

Representative Gwinn continued: "The one-party system entrenches further. Voting booths are in the basements of Government socialized houses. Election district leaders, like those in Gerper cent vote of the tenants in appreciation of the party that builds the houses."

Asserting that Washington is managing our farms and farmers, he said that the United States Government holds mortgages on one-quarter of United States farms; in fact, owns one-quarter of all the land in continental United States. He further contended that the Government controls the prices of beef, pork, milk, butter, bread and potatoes.

"Our socialism is the biggest employer in the forld. It has a with two payroll vote of devastating proportions, with two million employees outside the armed services receiving a half billion dollars per month," he averred.

"Down Serfdom Road"

Representative Gwinn charged that our new deal proposes to march down the road of serfdom by bribing doctors to socialize health and medicine from Washington; that the bribe would include 750,000 doctors, nurses and hospital personnel.

The battle against socialism is nearer lost than won . . . we're sending people to Congress now with the philosophy of socialism, according to Gwinn.

Representative Lawrence Smith, another speaker on the morning program, also attacked the President's National health program warning that it could lead to socialized medicine. Many doctors emerging from their internship would take the $8,000 instead of building up a private practice. "If we get socialized medicine, what will happen if a woman has a baby on Saturday when the Government offices are closed?" he asked.

Principal speakers at the 9 a. m. session will include Senator Karl Mundt of North Dakota, Representative Clare Hoffman of Michigan and Senator Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin.

Mrs. Truman Invited To Democratic Club Tea

One on the Aisle—

This 'Ice-Capade' Is Wonderful!

By Richard L. Coe

MORE BEAUTIFUL AND exciting than ever, "Ice-Capades of 1949" is at the Uline Arena for a run through next Thursday night. It's a swell show and if you can nab any of the dwindling supply of tickets you should.

Granted, I'm a pushover for these refrigerated saturnalias, but I was openly disappointed with last year's edition. This new one, on the contrary, is a far, far better show, boasting several new people and some brilliantly devised production numbers.

The opening night performance was for the benefit of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, attracting a festival-minded audience of 5200 headed by Miss Margaret Truman. I've seen a lot of ice shows in my hoary time, but never have I seen an audience which made itself so much a part of the show. Each trick of performance brought a spontaneous burst of applause and when the Old Smoothies waltzed on in their familiar next-to-closing spot they brought cheers from the packed house—and the press box.

The big attraction this year is "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," a charming, lively telling inspired by Walt Disney's film and with his aid. You see Dopey, Grumpy and the rest just as they were in the Disney classic. The masks for the little men have been wondrously well designed, Chuckkie Stein makes a happy Dopey and you couldn't ask for a better Snow White and her Prince Charming than Donna Atwood and Bobby Specht.

A fine advance has been made in this and other numbers by slick coordination between the skaters on the ice and those who sing their songs into the p. a. system. It's become quite an effective illusion.

Comedy is stronger than ever with Eric Waite pulling a Beatrice Lillie as a recalcitrant lady of the chorus who louses things up but good, as grandma never used to say, in "Grecian Nights." Jackson and Lynam, too, are packets of fun in a vivid Fiesta that boasts a lurid Carmen. And while Hugh Forgie and Stig Larson play their remarkable badminton on ice, you've got unpredictable laughs aplenty.

For sheer skating there are any number of skilled artists, headed by Donna and Bobby. Both these young folks have twirls and turns to dazzle the dizziest. The Benoit Sisters have glittering skill for their "Reflected Personalities" and Mary Lela Wood and Alan Konrad have been advanced to important spots of their own. Johnny Lettengarver, the Mullen Twins and Raiche, Dick Salter and Johnny Kinney are other icemen who'll catch your admiration.

There's a new chap for the stilts stuff and he's grand, Baltimore's Charles Slagle, a fine addition to the company. (If I named all who deserve mention, this would become a catalogue.)

Need you be told that Orrin Markhus and Irma Thomas are the Old Smoothies and that their suave waltzing remains one of the Capades high spots? Surrounded as they are by the zest of youth, their turn is made the more dramatic by contrast. Just when you get to thinking all this dashing about on ice belongs to youngsters, the Old Smoothies are on to remind you that skating can be fun at any age.

But it's in the large group numbers "Ice-Capades" is at its most exciting. Here you have the variety of color, the sheer strength that only healthful living commands; to the grace of ballet is added the smooth speed that only skating could achieve. These brilliant patterns set by Chester Hale alone are worth the visit.

Yes, "Ice-Capades of 1949" definitely is a show to see.

THE WEEKEND'S BIG event is Sunday night's benefit for the March of Dimes at the Playhouse . . . Mrs. Truman and Miss Margaret will be in what promises to be a capacity house for the advance showing of "Monsieur Vincent" and the entertainment of Nino Martini, Les Compagnons de la Chanson and Meyer Davis' orchestra . . . The final Sunday showing of "Mr. Perrin and Mr. Traill" will begin at 5:30, after which the house will be closed, reopening a half hour before the 8:30 benefit . . . "Mr. Perrin and Mr. Traill" will resume its run Monday morning.

RISING STARS—Mary Lela Wood and Alan Konrad, who've risen from the "Ice-Capades" ranks to their present spots in "Winter Wonderland," first of the ice revue's big production numbers. With Donna Atwood and Bobby Specht as the stars, the 1949 edition is now at Uline Arena, with extra performances this afternoon and Sunday afternoon

Joe Palooka May Fight For New Managers

A couple of weeks ago, Seymour Levine of 6-B Crescent rd., Greenbelt, Md., sent me a complaint about Humphrey Pennyworth. Or perhaps I should say "about Ham Fisher," Humphrey's creator.

It seems that Humphrey, who is so wide that he can't get through ordinary doorways, went to the movies—and sat in an ordinary theater seat. Seymour wanted to know how he managed it.

I passed his query along to Ham Fisher, and now have this reply:

"It was a bull on my part, and don't think I didn't get plenty of complaints from other readers. I should have remembered that Humphrey can't fit into an ordinary theater seat.

"While I'm writing to you—what are you doing over on my page? You can't draw.

"When I come to Washington for this year's National Celebrities Golf Tournament, I'm going to look into this business of you writing guys horning in on our comic page.

"What's more, I challenge you and Povich or any other duffer on The Post to an unfriendly round of golf, and I'll spot you three strokes on each side. Regards to the gang, Ham."

Knowing how serious Ham is about his golf, I suspect that the three strokes he's willing to concede me are paralytic, apoplectic and sun.

But the challenge is hereby accepted, and if Fisher is willing to play for money, Palooka will do his future fighting for Povich and me.

NATURE NOTES

A couple of weeks ago we ran a verse which sadly observed that the pods of the ginkgo tree are distinctly stinko.

P. D. Strang of High Wyndham, Bluemont, Va., answers: "The truth of the matter is that pods are borne only by the female trees; male trees bear no fruit. Intelligent park departments in other cities plant only male trees, and I've often wondered why our local park planners overlooked this fact."

For an explanation, I went to Raymond Gregg, chief of the naturalist division of Interior's National Capital Parks office. He put it this way:

"Mr Strang is right. But you'll notice that most of the female trees in this vicinity are 40 to 60 years old.

"Back in the days they were being brought over from the Orient there was little concern about the sex of the trees that were being planted. If the pods smelled bad, possibly the city did, too, at that time; nobody noticed, or complained. But recently, all new plantings have been male trees."

Ginkgo trees, incidentally, have sometimes been called "living fossils," because they have changed so little since prehistoric times. Curiously enough, Naturalist Gregg says that there's some dispute as to whether or not the smell of the pods is disagreeable.

The Chinese like it, and consider the seed a highly prized food delicacy.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Gentle, well-disciplined cat." (Sligo 4979).

MISCELLANY

Gordon W. McBride of 3323 Stuyvesant pl. nw. was filling out his fourth quarter income tax the other night when he noticed that the form on which he was working was titled: "Form 1124-C. Amen 1948." Gordon can't figure out whether this is merely an amended form, or "whether the Collector of Infernal Revenue has finally gotten religion" . . . Marjorie Hawkins of Warrenton, Va., responds to our item about Patrick Bligh by offering the interesting sidelight that Mr. Christian's descendants are still living on Pitcairn Island, and to this day the Christian family holds the respect of the natives . . . Shortly after our item noting that our morning contemporary had referred to the population of the United States as approaching "$150,000,000," F. E. Prior of Falls Church, Va., catches one of our afternoon papers gratuitously inserting the dollar sign in a similar statistic, and making the same mistake . . . Is it our turn now? . . . Maj. Charles S. Coulter of 4212 37th st. nw. indicates that such typographical slips aren't exactly new. The Salem (Mass.) Gazette and Register said more than 125 years ago: "Robert Jones was yesterday brought before the sitting magistrate, on a charge of having spoken reason" . . . Speaking of newspapers, Everett Lane of Comorn, Va., sends me a copy of the "Hungry Horse News," and if that isn't an unusual name, it'll do until one comes along . . . Invalid streetcar tokens for Children's Hospital have been received from Edward A. Bugbee of 69 Quint ave., Allston, Mass. (he found them in his Army overcoat); Helenmarie (that's the way she signed it, Mr. Printer) White; Paul E. Sweeney, jr., of 4713 Rosedale ave., Bethesda, Md. (war stamps); and Jack Bonnell of American Airlines (plus cash) . . . Gladys R. Keller of 1411 Chapin st. nw. wants to say a good word for Policeman No. 985, who did such a fine job in handling the Inaugural crowds. No. 985 is listed as Francis V. Andruzzi of 29 Randle Circle se. . . . What do you suppose has happened to the grand jury investigation of the local numbers racket?

PIED TONGUE DEPT.

"Seersucker houseboat $8.98."

The ad was called to my attention by WTOP's genial Claude Mahoney, who added as an afterthought:

"Don't credit this one to me. As sure as I poke fun at some newspaper's typographical slipups, the next day I get my tongue twisted and make a lot of fluffs on my program."

Enough fluffs to float a seersucker houseboat, Claude?

ILS NE PASSERONT PAS

On noting that "The Vicious Circle" was playing at the Pix Theater, Eleanor M. Haight of 830 Transportation Building murmured:

"Shouldn't they have booked that one into the Dupont?"

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Rita Hayworth's marriage to Aly Kahn depends upon his ability to get a divorce from his wife, Joan, who previously was married to Lowel Guinness. When Joan left Guinness to run off with Aly Kahn, her former father-in-law, Benjy Guinness, met her new father-in-law, the Aga Kahn, in a London hotel elevator. They had known each other for a long time, but at this meeting they glared at each other . . . Guinness finally spoke. He said to the Aga Kahn: "This would never have happened if your boy had gone to Eton" . . . The Aga Kahn replied: "It wouldn't have happened if yours hadn't."

Edgar Bergen's capital-gains deal which will take him to CBS does not involve the sale of Charley McCarthy. "I couldn't sell Charley," said Bergen in the Stork Club yesterday. "In the first place, I'd worry about how to hold onto the money. And secondly, as long as there are tents and auditoriums for rent, I can always make a living with Charley" . . . Charles Boyer's performance in "Red Gloves" is so towering that he's the only star on Broadway who doesn't have an understudy . . . Edith Sitwell said of Anthony Eden: "He has restaurant chic and restaurant manners."

Al Hirschfeld, the artist, often finds that his signature has been removed from his commercial drawings when they are printed. To make sure that he would be credited with the sketch he made of Ray Bolger, for the "Where's Charley?" ads, the artist worked his name into the fringe of Bolger's flying muffler.

Although "Death of a Salesman," the new Arthur Miller play directed by Elia Kazan, still is in its out-of-town tryout stage, its success seems so assured that plans are being arranged to make the movie version in New York with the same cast, and with a Twentieth Century-Fox release.

The Rockefeller investments never include any publication ventures, because the family's policy is never to finance anything which the public might construe as an attempt to influence the press.

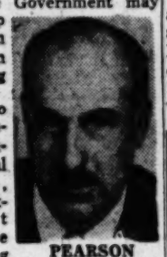
Brannan Sees Grain Surplus

By Drew Pearson

Forthright Secretary of Agriculture Charlie Brannan warned a closed-door Senate session this week that the Government may have to buy up 800 million bushels of grain this coming year.



PEARSON

Reporting to a private session of the Senate Agricultural Committee, Brannan explained that farmers are overplanting grain and cotton, that prices may go into a tailspin. In this case the Government will have to take the crops off the farmers' hands. The money to do this, Brannan cautioned, is limited.

"Next year," he declared, "it is entirely possible we will have all of our working funds committed."

Though the Secretary of Agriculture could use more funds to protect support prices, it isn't likely that Congress will add to the $4,750,000,000 now available. This means the Government will probably be forced to lower support prices.

Senator Milton Young, North Dakota Republican, asked whether Brannan favored support prices kept as high as 100 per cent of parity, such as demanded by the Farmers' Union.

"It is desirable," replied the Secretary of Agriculture, "but looking at the other aspects of the price-support program, I don't believe it is at all possible."

He pointed out that the Agriculture Department not only couldn't stretch its money that far, but that 100 per cent of parity would encourage even more overplanting. Result would be an oversupply of commodities supported by the Government and a scarcity of commodities not under the price-support program.

In the end, it would be the housewives who would pay the bill, cautioned the Secretary of Agriculture. Abundant commodities would cost more because of the high prices paid by the Government to farmers, while scarce goods would also cost more because there wouldn't be enough to go around.

"The American people," Brannan shook his head, "will not stand for extreme costs."

Sen. Thomas' Elevators

Senators were amazed and amused when Chairman Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma, the speculating Senator, put forward an idea for curbing speculation. The man who was once up to his neck in the commodity market urged laying aside tremendous stocks of cotton and grain in order to discourage speculation. By taking large bulks out of circulation, Thomas argued, the speculators would have less to work with.

One Senator bit his tongue to keep from smiling. For it was the very same Thomas who delivered speeches on the Senate floor blasting the OPA for trying to restrict speculation, together with other speeches bound to influence the commodity market following which his friends cashed in. When colleagues started investigating Thomas, he scared off supersnooper Senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan with a letter threatening to expose some of Ferguson's activities.

Note—Maybe the reason Thomas has changed his tune, now favors Government purchase of warehouses and grain elevators, is that his speculating friend, Dyke Cullum, has been urging this.

Secretary Brannan didn't think much of Senator Thomas' suggestion. He wants Congress to remove the GOP-imposed restriction limiting the storage space which the Government can lease, but he did not want the Government to go into the business of buying or constructing elevators and warehouses. The Agriculture Department would rather help farm co-ops build storage, he said.

Citrus Fruit

Florida's Senator Spessard Holland raised the question of price supports for tree crops—such as Florida's citrus fruits, tung oil and pecans. He cited a letter from Ralph Trigg, head of production and marketing, reporting that the Agriculture Department contemplated no supports for tree crops.

Brannan replied that these commodities are indirectly supported by heavy Government purchases for school lunches and the European Recovery Program.

A little-noticed bill affecting several million workers and several thousand factories has just been introduced by Senator Cabot Lodge, Massachusetts Republican. It would require firms that do business with the Government to hire their employes by the year.

The company that has the security of a Government contract, argues Lodge, should pass that security on to its employes.

"The employe who receives this assurance then knows where he stands," explains the Senator from Massachusetts. "He can make commitments for the education of his children, for necessary dental or medical work, for payments on his house and for the other things which raise his standard of living.

"Unless he receives a guarantee that his wages would be paid for a year, he cannot make these commitments. Although he might by the end of the year have earned as much money, the fact that he had no assurance of it would have required him to live virtually a hand-to-mouth existence."
